Background to CQC

CQC's role is to regulate those who provide health and adult social care services and to protect and promote the health, safety and welfare of the people who use them. Over 2013/14 we began making radical changes to the way we regulate and inspect health and social care services. These help us to achieve our purpose of making sure people receive safe, effective, and compassionate, high-quality care, and encouraging services to improve.

Our Strategy for 2013-16 sets out what we aim to achieve.

Our new approach is differentiated by sector and our Board has set a challenging programme of inspection activity across all sectors.

We have appointed three Chief Inspectors who are leading the change to inspection through more specialist and expert teams across Adult Social Care [REDACTED] Hospitals [REDACTED] and Primary Medical Services [REDACTED]

- Our new Intelligent Monitoring model helps us assess risks to the quality of care offered by providers, and prioritise our inspection activity
- We began piloting our new style inspections in hospitals in September 2013 and in mental health trusts, community health trusts and GP out-of-hours services in January 2014
- We've introduced a rating system on a four-point scale: outstanding, good, requires improvement or inadequate

Objectives

CQC are seeking to procure an assessment partner to support high volume recruitment activity across the organisation under two headings; the design of bespoke assessment materials and the delivery of assessment events.

Duration

The contract will be established for an initial period of 18 months with an option to extend for a further period of 12 months taking the contract term to a maximum of 2 years and 6 months. The contract is intended to start in December 2014 or as otherwise agreed.

Any subsequent extension to the contract will be agreed between Care Quality Commission and the supplier. It is likely that Care Quality Commission will seek the supplier to demonstrate improvements and/or price reductions before considering an extension. For any extension(s) to the contract, discussions with the supplier shall be conducted sufficiently far in advance of the contract expiry date to arrive at an agreed position.

Requirement (including Specification)

This is an exciting time to join CQC. We're transforming the way we work, bringing a fresh new approach to the regulation of health and social care services that firmly puts us on the side of people using services.

We're looking for people who are passionate about great care, committed to making a difference, and who have a determination to take action where it is needed. In return we offer a role with real meaning, in an organisation that knows what it's here to do. Our new Academy will equip colleagues with the skills and knowledge to develop their career at CQC, in a culture that reflects our values of Excellence, Caring, Integrity and Teamwork.

Our recruitment processes need to communicate our passion, commitment and values but also need to reflect that the previous poor reputation of the organisation is a thing of the past. Our recruitment partner will work with us to design and deliver a robust approach to assessment and selection that imparts our organisation's values, behaviours and culture.

CQC have already run extensive recruitment campaigns for Inspectors, Inspection Managers and Analysts – all of which are critical to delivery of the programme - but this has not resulted in CQC meeting its full resource requirements.

The Executive Team have now set challenging targets for recruitment to increase the number of inspection staff by a further 600 roles by December 2015, of which 300 need to be in position by the end of March 2015. These new hires will be located across England and for some roles, geographical location will be a critical factor. The majority of Inspection staff are home based, and although most are full-time, we are looking to expand opportunities for flexible working.

We are also seeking candidates for Analyst roles, as well as a steady turnover of other roles.

Requirements

CQC are looking to procure services that fall across Lot 4 and Lot 5 of the Resourcing Services Framework. These include the design of assessment materials and the delivery of assessment events.

It would be desirable to have one supplier delivering work against both Lots however suppliers are able to bid for one or both Lots. Suppliers are asked to read through the entire Requirements and respond accordingly using the appropriate Solutions Proposal Template.

Design of Assessments (Lot 4 of Resourcing Services Framework – Design and Provision of tests, exercises and tools)

We are looking for suppliers to provide an experienced team of design specialists (occupational psychologists, business psychologists and assessment professionals) to support the ongoing design of bespoke assessments for a variety of job families across the business. Initially, this work will centre on our frontline Inspection staff (Inspectors and Inspection Managers), as well as on Registration Inspection and some of our Analyst type roles, as these roles are a priority recruitment area across the organisation. However, we would also look for the supplier to provide us with an ongoing design service not limited to those roles.

Our assessment design partner should be able to recommend and provide suitable off the shelf assessment tools, as well as have the capability to design bespoke CQC exercises, for example, competency based interview scripts, case studies, presentation style exercises, analytical reasoning tests, role plays and group exercises, amongst others.

We are looking for suppliers to have extensive experience of designing fully accessible assessments for the purposes of inclusivity. CQC would also expect that the design of assessments will include considerations made / alternatives suggested for candidates who have requested a range of reasonable adjustments.

Delivery of Assessment Events (Lot 5 of Resourcing Services Framework – Delivery of Events)

Suppliers should be able to demonstrate extensive experience of supporting volume recruitment projects, and have a ready-made professional, fully qualified assessment and delivery team. Our recruitment targets are challenging so we're looking for a partner who can offer complete scalability and a commitment to industry standard, legally defensible recruitment practices.

Campaign Set Up

CQC will manage the first stages in the recruitment process for all roles through the use of a CQC careers website and associated ATS. CQC is currently procuring a partner for attraction and employer branding purposes; this partner will manage our careers website and CQC's own managers and recruitment team will be responsible for the initial application form sifting.

We would like our assessment partner to be equally as passionate about the quality of our new hires as we are, and so would ask that suppliers tell us how they will work with us to understand our brand, values and ethos.

Quality of Delivery

We are looking for suppliers to assign a dedicated team to manage each campaign. We would like to know how assessment teams will communicate with candidates at each stage of the process, if required, to include resolving queries and delivering unsuccessful outcomes (CQC will manage the offer process and make offers of employment directly, but we may ask suppliers to deliver unsuccessful outcomes, to include detailed feedback to both internal and external candidates). We ask that suppliers tell us the ways that candidates can contact their assessment teams (telephone, dedicated email inbox, possible web chat or SMS options) and the days / hours of operation / availability of those teams.

Suppliers should also be able to demonstrate extensive experience of working with candidates who have requested reasonable adjustments or applied through the Guaranteed Interview Scheme.

Data and Management Information

CQC expects that suppliers keep robust management information and provide this frequently. Suppliers should have the systems and processes in place to allow for daily, weekly and monthly reporting; daily reports should be clear and show that candidates are being progressed through the process in a timely manner.

CQC insists on reliable and viable data for every candidate journey and would expect suppliers to be reviewing and understanding this data and providing insight and recommendations on how we can drive efficiencies, enhance conversion rates or make improvements to candidate management / communications as the campaigns progress.

Candidate Feedback

Where candidate feedback is the responsibility of the supplier; we would like to understand the means and approach to delivering this feedback.

Valuing diversity

In CQC we our objective is to create an inclusive organisation, where every employee's contribution is valued. We want to promote equality and inclusion in our work, employment practices, training and through our suppliers. Importantly, we aim to deliver assessment strategies that are inclusive, helping us to secure talented people from a diverse base and support individual's different needs and requirements where we can.

Recruitment information should be made as accessible as possible and materials made available in alternate formats to meet the needs of candidates with disabilities. CQC offers a Guaranteed Interview Scheme to candidates with disabilities and is signed up to the 'Two Ticks' scheme

Authority Responsibilities

CQC will appoint a representative to manage the service during the period of the requirement delivery. The overall relationship will be managed by the Head of Recruitment or nominated deputy; with day to day workflow instructed by the recruitment team and contract arrangements managed by a member of the procurement team.

CQC will hold formal review meetings on a quarterly or six monthly basis reviewing areas as outlined in the Contract Management section.

Monthly service meetings may also be required and the contents will be agreed prior to contract award.

During periods of delivery, CQC will ask for at least weekly delivery calls, although at campaign set up stages, it may be necessary to run a series of daily calls for an agreed period

Contractor Responsibilities

- The contractor should appoint a contract / client manager to oversee the work, manage the overall CQC relationship and act as a point of escalation
- The contractor should agree a formal escalation process with CQC
- The contractor will agree with CQC all bespoke SLA's at the beginning of the relationship, before any work has started
- Performance will be measured directly against agreed service levels
- CQC will require accurate management information daily, weekly and monthly during periods of delivery
- CQC will ask for monthly reviews to include monthly and YTD spend figures, amounts invoiced and due to be invoiced, and the success rates of live campaigns
- The contractor will also provide timely and ongoing evaluation of the success of ongoing work and propose new, creative ideas or alternative solutions for continuous improvement

Contract Management and Monitoring

CQC will require Key Performance Indicators in the following areas - suppliers should state as part of their bid suggested specific indicators by area. These will form part of the bid evaluation:

- CQC to receive results from assessment events – within 24 hours of the assessment event
- Provision of feedback to candidates – within 72 hours
- Cost per assessment event
- Quality of provision – through mini audits and observations undertaken by CQC of assessment events
- Quality of candidate management processes – measured by numbers of issues arising as a result of candidate management practices / candidate satisfaction levels
- Target time for dealing with escalations, problems or issues, as they arise

CQC and the supplier would agree the Key Performance Indicators at the outset; these KPI's will be used to measure the success of the contract.

The contractor should also, for the life of the contract:

- Monitor the quality and effectiveness of the provision, ensuring customer satisfaction in accordance with the KPI's
- Be prepared to attend meetings on site to discuss requirements for new campaigns, work with line managers to support discussion on creative attraction strategies, and to review progress and discuss the ongoing service
- The contractor should also attend a post contract review with CQC to review whether the objectives of the contract were met, to review the benefits achieved and to identify any lessons learnt for future projects

Skills and Knowledge Transfer

CQC would own the intellectual property rights on all assessment material and content designed for CQC use.

Suppliers should also say how they would intend to transfer knowledge to the in house recruitment team, where appropriate, at the end of the campaigns.

Suppliers should also list any value add services in this area, around training or guidance for hiring managers or the in house recruitment team.

	Response: It is a particularly exciting time for the CQC as it redefines and builds its service and we at GatenbySanderson think we are well positioned to support you in delivering this project successfully. We are the leading public sector specialist recruiter, with in-depth knowledge of health and social care. We employ a dedicated team of experts in assessment design, who are Registered and Chartered Psychologists with considerable experience. Our track record in delivering high volume assessments for regulatory bodies speaks for itself. We have spent the last two years working hand in glove with Ofsted to design numerous bespoke assessment centres for inspector roles; we have done the same for the Parole Board and for the General Dental Council, too. The team is absolutely passionate about applying that experience to support other organisations, like the CQC, to identify the best people to drive improvement in public services. We offer: a dedicated, expert team committed to delivering to high standards; understanding of the sector and of the role of an organisation that inspects and regulates; experience of working with fast paced organisations which are subject to intense public and political scrutiny; and a business that is large enough to deliver assessments at scale yet small enough to care about the candidates and our working relationship with you.
B2	Developing Creative Solutions Please detail a campaign carried out in the last 24 months that has evidenced the design of assessment material for similar types or organisations or roles, against the backdrop of the volumes of roles, as set out in the specification – including how you would engage and communicate with CQC hiring managers during the job analysis phase and how you would propose to provide suitable off the shelf tools or bespoke assessments to CQC.	20%
	Response: GatenbySanderson has been Ofsted's sole supplier of assessment services for two years. In that time we have designed bespoke assessment centres for numerous inspection roles: HMI (equivalent to Inspector) and Senior HMI (equivalent to Managing Inspector) within (children's) Social Care; Education; and FE & Skills; and Regulatory Inspector and Regulatory Inspection Manager within Social Care and Early Childhood; as well as many other roles at senior and more junior levels.

All of our assessment centres have incorporated bespoke work simulation exercises that we developed in consultation with Ofsted key stakeholders (role play, presentations, written tasks), as well as off the shelf psychometric tests. We have also developed an online platform to undertake timed assessments for multiple candidates across multiple locations. It is available for the CQC to use should we secure this contract (we would change the content of the assessments).

Throughout the duration of our work with Ofsted, the team developing assessment exercises have had to understand the subtle but important differences between the work of inspectors in the different remits. We developed this understanding through extensive consultation with stakeholders as well as desk research into the roles. We have also had to remain abreast of developments within Ofsted, which is an organisation that moves at pace in response to public and political pressure and in its own desire for continuous improvement. It has been essential that our assessment exercises have kept pace with these changes. The client remarked, in unsolicited feedback: [Their] knowledge of our business is now vast.... and "For all commissioned work, GatenbySanderson has been able to form dedicated and highly knowledgeable teams, gaining the confidence of a variety of senior stakeholders. GatenbySanderson has been honest and open throughout design work whilst keeping a business focus and ensuring that they understand Ofsted's unique organisational and political context."

The remainder of this response will detail the design work that we have done for inspection roles within Social Care at Ofsted, which commenced in December 2012 and has been ongoing since then. We will apply the same successful approach to this contract, of course with some adaptations to suit the working culture and style at CQC. For Ofsted we developed bespoke assessment exercises. If the CQC would like us to select off the shelf tools, we will carry out the same stakeholder research and then apply that learning to the selection of tools from reputable suppliers. We will then adapt scoring guides to ensure they measure competencies relevant and specific to the CQC roles.

Our work at Ofsted – an example to illustrate our experience

At Ofsted we began with job analysis to understand the HMI and Senior HMI roles. We consulted stakeholders (Regional Directors, Director of Operations, Head of HR, the Chair) to understand 'what good looks like' in the role and their expectations of successful candidates. Not only did these discussions generate materials for the assessment centre, they also enabled us to 'sell' the concept and gain buy-in. This is a critical step and we ask that the CQC makes time in diaries to enable us to undertake similar discussions. We also read inspection reports, the Annual Report and other internal documents; again we would expect these to be available for this contract.

Critically, Ofsted was changing its approach to inspections and this required a shift in mindset amongst inspectors. It was important that this shift was communicated to both internal and external candidates, which we achieved through the new competencies and realistic assessment centre exercises. As we enhanced our understanding of Ofsted's aims for children and young people, we became very passionate about and committed to identifying the best candidates for their inspection teams. We assigned a core team to the project, enabling them to gain deep insight into Ofsted's culture and values. We will do the same for this contract.

The next step was to create an outline of the content of the assessment centre for approval by stakeholders, having mapped the competencies to the exercises we had agreed. We then commenced the detailed design work. We drew on our experience of assessing candidates for children's social care roles in local authorities; we also consulted our contacts in these areas to understand their interactions with Ofsted inspectors, to gain a different perspective. We will do the same for this contract, using our experience of and contacts in health and adult social care (protecting confidences of course). Being a high profile organisation, there was a lot of material in the media to draw on in order to create a very realistic challenge for candidates within the exercises and it gave us insight into how the public views the organisation. We imagine the same will be useful for the CQC.

The assessment centre we agreed upon for HMI contained the following exercises: a role play with an external stakeholder; a presentation exercise; an 'off the shelf' test of critical thinking (psychometric); and a written exercise. Senior HMI were given a different stakeholder scenario in the role play exercise, as well as a second role play that was an internal performance management scenario, to test their managerial and leadership skills. The scenarios were as follows:

External role play – designed to provide direct evidence of how candidates would handle a difficult conversation with a provider, balancing robust challenge with support and relationship building. HMI candidates had to challenge and support a Headteacher whose school had consistently been graded 'RI' and could not see why it was not 'Good'. SHMI candidates were tasked with meeting a Director of Children's Services to discuss the performance of schools across their borough, many of which were graded 'RI' and needed to improve. SHMI also undertook a second role play to resolve a performance issue within their inspection team. All of the role plays contained data and written information to analyse as background to the meeting.

Professional actors were briefed to be reluctant and challenging, and to respond to how candidates handled the interaction so that it felt realistic. Ofsted colleagues fed into the actor brief to ensure realism.

Presentation – designed to test candidates' ability to both explain and promote Ofsted's new approach to inspections, to a sceptical audience of Headteachers. Assessors were briefed to ask challenging questions to put candidates on the spot. Over time, we have been able to quickly adapt this exercise as new information, frameworks and announcements have emerged, so that materials are always up to date.

Written exercise – this task has also evolved over time, to ensure that we were rigorously testing the quality of candidates' written work and to protect the integrity of the exercise. Tasks have included: quality checking an inspection report; responding to a letter from a local politician around concerns with safeguarding arrangements; and identifying key areas of strength and improvement from inspection evidence.

Test of critical thinking – the Watson Glaser Critical Thinking Appraisal, a psychometric test, has proved to be a very useful measure of candidates' ability to interpret and analyse complex information under time pressure, which mirrored the task of an inspector. We now have a bank of results that we can analyse and norm for Ofsted; the same can be achieved for the CQC once we have assessed a sufficient number of candidates.

We have also developed group exercises and competency-based interviews for other roles within inspection, selected in-tray exercises for use in senior administrative positions, as well as identifying the most appropriate psychometric tools for senior appointments.

All of the assessment centre exercises were accompanied by assessor briefs, clear candidate instructions and marking guides, with behaviourally anchored rating scales aligned to Ofsted's competencies. This ensured defensible, robust and objective assessment against the competencies and person specification. We also developed a matrix for examining each candidate's performance in the assessment centre during the wash up session at the end. All of this would be in place whether using bespoke or off the shelf tools.

Once the assessment centres were up and running, we continued to involve key stakeholders. The Head of HR, members of the Change team and the Director of Operations attended the first few assessment centres. They were able to contribute important context to our assessments of the candidates and they played a full part in arriving at decisions about every candidate. They took the decisions from the assessment centre to interview panels, so that there was a link from the centres back into the business. This arrangement has continued, as it benefits all concerned.

Off the shelf exercises

Ofsted was keen to invest in the development of a suite of bespoke tools. However many other clients make use of 'off the shelf' exercises to save time and resources and to present a different type of challenge for candidates. We have our own bank of exercises to draw from, as well as a track record of using exercises from specialist suppliers. When using off the shelf tools we get the closest match possible to the competencies important for success in the role and to the context in which candidates will be operating (eg the public sector), to ensure some degree of face validity. We work with one particular supplier often, so we know which of their exercises tend to work best at different levels. We always create our own scoring guides, mapping the standard indicators to the organisation's own competencies for enhanced relevance. We can also purchase psychometric tests from all publishers to select the most appropriate for the role in question.

Creative solutions - Online testing

Our online test platform was developed last year in response to a request from Ofsted to assess a significant number of candidates quickly for an internal promotion into a National Lead role. They did not have the capacity to invest in assessment centres or to take people out of the business, but needed an assessment that was very role specific. In response, we developed a platform to host online written tasks. It has the following functionality:

- Varied case study content and questions can be uploaded to the site
- Ability to send out hyperlinks via email for immediate and secure access to the test
- A visible countdown timer, which can be amended so that candidates can have extra time where reasonable adjustments are required
- Text size can be enhanced to support candidates needing adjustments
- Responses can be tracked and monitored in real time and any technical issues resolved swiftly
- Cut and paste and spell check functions can be disabled to allow assessment of the quality of candidates' written work. - Time limited, the test will close after a certain deadline - Responses downloadable immediately in an easy to read pdf format. We have just launched the online test as an additional stage in the recruitment process for social care HMI, so that candidates' written skills can be assessed before they are invited to assessment centre, hence saving any investment in candidates who cannot meet a fundamental standard. CQC can make use of this online platform to host its own exercises, if working in partnership with GatenbySanderson. Accessible assessment materials Throughout our work with Ofsted and also with other clients, we have ensured that our assessments are accessible to all. Candidates are reminded to contact us to discuss reasonable adjustments they may need to enable them to participate fairly. We have also supported clients adhering to the Two Ticks scheme. The team has: - Granted extra time to candidates - Printed materials in large font or on different coloured paper to enable easier reading - Allowed the use of Dragon software and similar products to enable candidates to read written material, as well as voice recognition software to enable them to produce their answers - We removed the time limit in the role play and presentation for a candidate who had a speech condition that prevented him from being able to speak clearly, at speed. - Assessment materials are written in clear, plain English - Materials can be converted into Braille format should the need arise. We have welcomed 'readers' to support certain candidates within the assessment centre.

Resource Plan

Provide a complete resource plan for the delivery of the assessment design services. Please provide a high level project plan that evidences the ability to meet the milestones set out in this specification, including any risks to the ability to meet these key dates.

Response:

To successfully manage an assessment and selection campaign of this scale, it's imperative that a robust project plan is in place so that we can both chart progress from beginning to end. When designing assessments it is critical that materials are approved and ready to go for the assessment centres, but that sufficient time is allowed for stakeholders to feel they have played a part. We will ensure there is scope for this in the plan.

We will work backwards from your appointment deadlines, identifying key milestones in the planning, job analysis and design phases to ensure that all materials are ready. This includes templates for reports and the issuing of management information.

Below we have outlined a high level project plan as requested. We would expect, if successfully appointed, to devise a detailed project plan with your assistance as one of the first actions for this campaign. The plan would begin immediately from the moment the contract has been awarded on 10th December.

Task	Action	Start	End	Considerations/Risks

Quality assurance

We share your commitment to quality. In a project of this size and scale, we welcome your desire to hold regular progress update meetings and reviews to ensure the project remains on track, both in terms of progress and also quality and spend. We will do the following to monitor, measure and assure:

- Agree a schedule of regular update/progress meetings and host them via conference call or meeting,, eg weekly update calls.

	- Agree KPIs. For this Lot, we suggest: deadlines in project plan are met; stakeholders approve exercises with minimal amendments; exercise materials are error free and professionally presented; exercises accurately reflect the target role; exercises successfully differentiate between candidates; exercises generate sufficient evidence against the competencies. - Appoint a client/contract manager to oversee the work, manage the relationship and act as a point of escalation. We will agree an escalation process with you. - Provide management information as required. - Send outlines and drafts of exercises and other materials for early approval. - Get final versions of materials checked and formally approved before use. - Open up communication between GS and the CQC – ask for feedback and act on it, reporting back to you on our actions. - Design work will always be done by an experienced, qualified Psychologist with the appropriate technical skills. - Quality of work will be overseen by the project manager and will not go to CQC until it has been approved internally. - Feedback will be sought from CQC, from candidates, from assessors and actors on the quality and effectiveness of assessment materials.

B5	Quality of Hires We would like our assessment partner to be equally as passionate about the quality of our new hires as we are, and so would ask that suppliers tell us how they will work with us to understand our brand, values and ethos, and how these would be worked into the overall strategy for assessment services. Response: As your assessment partner, GatenbySanderson will be completely committed to delivering high quality outcomes; we recognise that, ultimately, the quality of new hires will have a real impact on the quality of care. This is something that touches every one of us at some point in our lives. As the leading specialist recruiter in the public sector, we believe passionately in making a difference through our work. Contracts such as this enable us to do just that. We are also well aware that when developing and delivering assessments we are your brand ambassador. We will not be drawn into any criticism of the CQC and we will protect your reputation with the same care that we protect our own. Should there ever be any concerns over the quality of our work, the way in which we are delivering it, or how we are behaving, we would encourage you to share them. The client relationship manager, [REDACTED] will be your first point of contact for any concerns which, if not addressed, can be escalated to Joint Managing Partner, [REDACTED] for attention. We feel confident that we will develop a working relationship that prevents issues from getting to this stage, however. The fundamental standards the CQC expects of care providers are to be safe,	10% effective, well led, caring, and responsive. GatenbySanderson will strive to live up to these expectations too. We will run effective assessments that deliver what they are supposed to; they will be well led, which means managed and organised efficiently and seamlessly; we are known for being responsive to client needs – previous feedback attests to this; and we are known for caring about candidates too. Assessment is a two-way process. We will work in partnership with the CQC team, keeping in close contact and making joint decisions. We will spend time ensuring that candidates have the information and guidance they need to help them excel at assessment centre, including those who require adjustments to help them participate on an equal footing. Finally, safety in the context of assessments is about running a rigorous, fair and objective process that delivers the right people into the right roles.

To put this into practice, we will start by assigning a dedicated team to the contract. Led by a Project Manager, we will nominate a Lead Designer and a Lead Assessor, as well as a Business Support Officer. This core team will meet counterparts from CQC to begin getting to know you and the organisation; we may want to discuss an 'induction' for example, so that we quickly gain important insights. Our discussions with stakeholders during the job analysis phase will give us rich insights into how CQC operates, but we will also consult publications such as the strategy, annual reports and press releases to enhance this. The GS team tends to get very absorbed in the client organisation on a project this size; we look out for media coverage and keep up to date with developments in the organisation. Listening to service users and the public is central to your new approach to inspection and we would like to explore if our team can do the same, to find out how the CQC and its inspection teams are perceived. Where possible, we would like to shadow some inspection work so that we can really get to grips with the difference inspectors make.

When it comes to the design of assessment materials, we will ensure that they are approved by key stakeholders before they are used, including the initial outline and the detailed versions. Their input is critical for ensuring that the exercise materials reflect CQC's ethos, brand and values. If we do any work on the competencies, we will ensure the values are built into those too.

You are looking for high quality solutions. This aligns with what GatenbySanderson always aspires to deliver. We will ensure this happens in a number of ways:

- Project planning in partnership with the CQC team, to ensure clarity of expectations and deliverables.
- Agreement of KPIs and regular reviews against these.
- A programme of update calls, at least monthly and up to fortnightly, weekly or daily depending on the stage the project has reached.
- A clear process for providing feedback to each other but, more importantly, a relationship that enables mutual support and challenge throughout.
- An agreed mechanism for raising issues, problems or complaints in the unlikely event these occur. In our 2 year partnership with Ofsted we have had no such issues.
- An early review of outcomes to ensure the project is on track
- Further consultation with stakeholders as the project progresses to check they are comfortable with where things are up to.
- As necessary, circulate meeting minutes and record key decisions so that interested parties can be kept in the loop. In our work with the GDC, we record progress against the project plan and record decisions made by the project team, so that the Appointments Committee can be kept up to date. Finally, we would strongly encourage CQC colleagues to participate in the assessment centres wherever possible. Although resources may sometimes not permit it, we have found it invaluable for building a collaborative way of working and for fostering a better partnership. That way, the assessments are CQC led and not something delivered to you by a third party. In the course of the exercise design, we suggest that a member of the project team participates in all stakeholder meetings to show that the work is still 'owned' by the CQC, albeit being delivered by a third party. Feedback from a client attests to our ability to provide the highest quality solutions: "It's thanks to how [they] have worked with us, from understanding our brief, developing the exercises and through to running the centres, that made us decide to extend the contract to our HMI assessment. Our Board have been very pleased with the quality and outcomes from the centres...."

B6	Valuing Diversity Please provide evidence of the successful delivery of assessment campaigns designed to attract a diverse workforce, including the provision of fully accessible assessments and inclusive assessment events, designed to support candidates who require reasonable adjustments.	5%
	Response: Running inclusive assessments For a great many of our clients it is particularly important that the assessment process is seen to be fair and that they have the confidence in knowing their provider can make the adjustments to enable all candidates to participate equally. In a recent campaign with a major professional regulator (the General Dental Council) we were required to assist our client with assessing and selecting candidates from differing roles and backgrounds. It was important that those we appointed represented the diversity of the UK population. Furthermore, the client had found that previous selection exercises had disadvantaged certain candidates and put some off applying. We were chosen as a partner with a track record in appointing candidates from diverse backgrounds. The steps we took to run a fully accessible and inclusive assessment event, were: Advised on the fairest method for sifting applications from a very large and diverse group of applicants for a role that has no specific knowledge or experience requirements. We recommended two online psychometric tests (an aptitude measure and a styles measure), to provide an objective, valid and reliable result. This was found to be much fairer and more accessible to the diverse candidate group than an application form. Drawing on current literature around adverse impact and how to minimise it, we ensured we provided candidates with comprehensive information about the assessments in advance, so that they could do their best. We made clear to candidates how to request reasonable adjustments. A psychologist discussed the assessment process with each person needing adjustments, so that agreement could be reached on the changes to be made. This ranged from granting additional time and printing materials on different coloured paper or in different fonts, to the use of a 'reader' for a blind candidate and specialist computer programmes for producing written work (voice recognition software, 'Dragon' etc). When software was not compatible we physically aided candidates with completing the assessments.

We have ensured premises are accessible and we have made allowances for candidates with physical needs who require more time to move from room to room. Sometimes, this has entailed making last minute changes to the timetable (eg we had a candidate who was recovering from an unexpected operation yet still wanted to attend the assessment centre).

We thought about the makeup and diversity of those in group discussions and interview panels along with the diversity of the assessors observing candidates.

Every candidate was sent joining instructions to give them a consistent, clear and thorough briefing about what to expect on the day and how to prepare. We gave a supportive and informative introduction to the assessment centre too, answering questions and putting candidates at ease. Feedback from candidates showed that they really valued this: "Excellent. Very clear and helpful"; "Everyone was very approachable and helpful throughout the whole process"; "I think this has been a very professional and well organised recruitment and I commend you".

We continuously monitored diversity figures. We carried out adverse impact calculations on assessment data to ensure candidates from BME backgrounds were not disadvantaged and we took necessary steps to address this. In addition, we supported the client in answering a candidate's complaint about the selection exercise, using research and academic literature to illustrate the fairness and objectivity of the assessments. Whilst it is regrettable that this occurred, our thorough process ensured that the complaint did not escalate.

To ensure transparency and to enable personal growth and development, all candidates were invited to receive feedback. Irrespective of the outcome, a professionally run assessment that culminates in informative feedback will leave candidates feeling they have had a fair and equal chance of succeeding.

Steps we will take

We will apply the above experience, and our many other examples, to designing and running the assessments under this contract. To further ensure fairness and accessibility we will:

- Conduct job analysis, to ensure we choose selection tools that reflect the demands of the role so that we are only testing candidates against those specific criteria;
- Use competency-based scoring guides so that assessors can objectively score candidates against the criteria from the person specification only;
- Deploy the best practice approach to assessment: Observe Record Classify Evaluate;
- Use reputable psychometric tests with sound reliability and validity statistics that have been approved by the British Psychological Society (BPS);
- Only using trained and appropriately qualified test users and assessors;
- Brief assessors to ensure consistency of experience and scoring for candidates;
- Quality assure the assessments and check inter-rater reliability;

	• Ensure candidates are aware of and feel able to highlight any reasonable adjustments they may need to enable them to participate fairly and equally in the selection process; • Give clear guidelines for completion of assessments to minimise anxiety and promote optimal outputs for each individual. Added value Our main concern is always to ensure that candidates feel they have had a fair opportunity to demonstrate their skills, as well as a positive experience. We know from ad hoc feedback that most candidates do, but for this contract we will gather feedback formally from candidates so that we can continue to improve their experience and our service to you as a client. We will follow up with those for whom we have made reasonable adjustments and ask if they would like to comment on their particular experiences.
