Schedule 1 - Services

Document processing

Processing documents involves the extraction of the document text and metadata from electronic files for searching as well as separating out email attachments from their parent emails so each document can be uniquely numbered and reviewed discretely. Additionally filtering of non-reviewable or system files can be performed to reduce the volume of irrelevant documents for review.

Document deduplication

Duplicate documents can be identified using their MD5Hash values to reduce the overall volume of documents for review and to ensure that review teams are not looking at repetitive information.

Application of search terms and filtering criteria

Keyword searches and other criteria, such as date ranges, are applied to target the most relevant documents which are then prepared for loading to the REDACTED software for further review.

Online document hosting

The document hosting platform, REDACTED, acts as both a pre-disclosure preparation workspace as well as a powerful research tool allowing users to search for documents relating to key witnesses and issues which form the themes of investigations and inquiries. Search results and individual documents can be coded and accessed quickly via fast links and data can be visualised using a range of graphical reporting and display tools.

Analytics

Advanced analytical options are available which search through data sets and group documents according to concepts based on the full text content. This provides users with powerful features to assist with grouping documents on cases with very large document volumes.

Services include:

- Advanced searching and analysis
- Email threading
- Near duplicate analysis
- Data visualisation
- Technology Assisted Review

Redaction

Electronic document redaction options include plain black or white boxes, a cross (designed for full page redactions) or custom text. Full page redactions can be made across multiple pages at a single instruction if large page ranges need to be protected.

Document production/export

The delivery of sub-sets of documents to approved third parties by exporting them in a ready to load format tailored to meet the specific requirements of the receiving software. At the conclusion of the project the Project Manager can consult with The National Archives and deliver documents to them in an agreed format.

Project Management and Technical Analyst support

Project Managers and Technical Analysts are available to provide a variety of services that may be required during the project. The services include: The transfer documents to REDACTED, search creation and consultation, creation of batch review sets, courier booking and logistics, consulting, batch coding fields, indexing, REDACTED, investigation into corrupt files, document deletions, document replacements, Audio-Visual material identification, data extraction/duplication/manipulation, and user training.
