17 GLD Headline Requirement

17.1 The Requirement

On behalf of the government legal community the Government Legal Department (GLD) is putting in place a Contract to provide online legal information Services. All users of the online Services required will be personal users.

17.2 Background to the requirement

17.2.1 The government legal community does not include all lawyers working in Government. For example, the Crown Prosecution Service, HM Courts Service, and the Scottish Departments, employ lawyers who do not form part of our contract requirement.

17.2.2 Therefore, for the purposes of this specification, references to the government legal community should be seen as a flexible group of Government bodies for whom subscription Services may be delivered via the proposed contract. Individuals may move from organisation to organisation and organisations could constitute any government body or agency listed at <https://www.gov.uk/government/organisations> that the GLD may wish to allocate access to the subscription service. See Annex A.

20 GLD content

20.1 The combination of department and organisations varies depending on Machinery of Government changes and the need for legal information varies accordingly.

20.2 Users within the Other Government Departments group are likely to require online information for the following reasons:

20.2.1 for libraries to provide enquiry Services on an ad hoc basis to staff within their department;

20.2.2 for individual users within the department with a requirement for regular access to current legal information who are not already served by the LION.

- 20.3 The user group for this service is varied; all participating organisations have different requirements both in terms of the content they require and who will access it and how they will do so. Therefore, flexible packaging and licensing options are essential.
- 20.4 The important role that legal publishers have in the dissemination of up to date legal information is recognised, however, it is also the case that the government is a major creator/supplier of much of the core content, and requires reliable and affordable access to this information for the efficient delivery of the judicial system/legal Services to government.
- 20.5 Both parties have an important role in making this information available and this can only be achieved via a mutually beneficial relationship.
- 20.6 Participating organisations should be able to allocate the licences they purchase across all parts of the organisations as best suits their current business needs without restrictions to particular groups or functions. So that in the event of any Machinery of Government changes or alterations in how legal Services are delivered, users can maintain/obtain access to information regardless of their parent organisation/department and location.
