Annex 2 – Specification

1. Background: NHS.UK Content evidence checks

1.1 Introduction to NHS Digital

NHS Digital is arranged into 8 directorates, which work together to improve health and social care.

The NHS website www.nhs.uk is part of the Citizen Health technology business unit, which sits in the Product delivery directorate.

The Product delivery directorate designs and delivers new products and services commissioned by NHS England, NHS Improvement, National Institute for Health Protection and other arm's-length bodies to help citizens, patients and clinicians across primary, secondary and social care.

The NHS website for England is the UK's biggest health website with more than 50 million visits every month. We provide accessible and reliable health information to the public.

More than 2,000 organisations share our content, including other NHS websites, local authorities, charities and commercial organisations, from start-ups to large technology leaders.

1.2 Introduction to evidence check reviews

The NHS website includes thousands of articles on symptoms, conditions and treatments as well as hundreds of articles on healthy living. It aims to help people make good choices about their health and use of NHS health and care services.

The content has been created using the best available up-to-date evidence and is presented in a balanced manner so that users can understand and act on it.

As a minimum each piece of content is reviewed at least once every 3 years to ensure it is clinically and factually accurate and based on the latest clinical guidance.

For the last 2 years our content team has been focused on delivering COVID-19-related products and services, which has created a backlog of reviews.

We are investigating options to help deal with this backlog and one of these is to work with an external organisation to work on one stage of our review process. This would require the external organisation to check the information presented on a topic is clinically accurate and aligned with the latest evidence (the evidence check).
