THE SPECIFICATION, INCLUDING PROJECT TIMETABLE AND EVALUATION OF TENDERS

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The Food Standards Agency is an independent Government department working across England, Wales and Northern Ireland to protect public health and consumers wider interest in food. We make sure food is safe and what it says it is.

The Agency is committed to openness, transparency and equality of treatment to all suppliers. As well as these principles, for science projects the final project report will be published on the Food Standards Agency website (www.food.gov.uk). For science projects we will encourage contractors to publish their work in peer reviewed scientific publications wherever possible. Also, in line with the Government's Transparency Agenda which aims to encourage more open access to data held by government, the Agency is developing a policy on the release of underpinning data from all of its science- and evidence-gathering projects. Data should be made freely available in an accessible format, as fully and as promptly as possible. Consideration should be given to data management as new contracts are being negotiated. Resource implications for this should be taken into account. The mechanism for publishing underpinning data should allow for the widest opportunity to enable its re-use. Where possible, underpinning data should be included in the final project report. Where data are included in the final report in pdf format, they should also be published separately in a format that can be used for further analysis. Large data sets can be provided separately in an annex to the report, and published, where possible, alongside the final report online. Where it is more appropriate to publish underpinning data in an existing database, archive, repository or other community resource, or for data to be saved in a specialist proprietary format, information will be provided on how the data can be accessed. There will be some circumstances where release of data may need to be restricted or anonymised for reasons of commercial and/or personal sensitivities.

Our strategy on science and evidence centres around the identification and effective use of science in achieving our ambitious goals for protecting consumers' interests in relation to food. It tackles the challenges of today, and emerging risks for the future. As such a requirement has arisen for a fit for purpose real-time PCR approach to determine horse and pork DNA in raw and processed beef.

The increased prevalence of meat adulteration and substitution has been identified as a current and emerging risk. Internationally validated methods for detecting and quantifying meat adulteration are required to support the FSA policy in ensuring UK food is safe and is what it says it is. The proposed work will ensure that the FSA and UK remain at the forefront of the current analytical science and maintain a pro-active stance with respect to regulations. This work directly supports our area of research interest of using modern technologies for 'innovation in food regulation'. We seek to remain cutting-edge when developing and implementing food regulations and this research will provide us with the innovative approach to fight against food fraud.

A. THE SPECIFICATION

Background

Following the UK/EU Horse-meat issue of 2013, where a significant amount of horse DNA was found in a large number of beef meat products on sale at a supermarket store, a real-time PCR approach for the quantitation of horse DNA in raw beef was developed at LGC through Defra funding¹. This method was validated through an international collaborative trial ("FS126001 - International collaborative trial of a real-time PCR method for the relative quantitation of horse DNA") by LGC and funded by the FSA². The success of this validation study has enabled the method to be formally subjected to European Standardisation at CEN where it is currently undergoing standardisation through CEN Technical Committee CEN TC460 on Food Authenticity.

A requirement to expand the real-time PCR approach to include pork meat in both raw and processed beef has resulted in the development of three SOP methods for the quantitation of horse and pork DNA in raw and processed beef background. The study was funded by Defra under its Food Authenticity Programme (Project FA0171 "Validation of Methods to Quantify Horse and Pork Meat Adulteration in Raw and Processed Beef"). The project looked at three new real-time-PCR methods for the relative quantitation of horse DNA in processed beef products, and the relative quantitation of pork DNA in raw and processed beef products. It included the development, the in-house validation and a limited UK based ring-trial (involving four UK laboratories). The study provided evidence of the fitness for purpose of the three new methods, as qualified by the limited (four lab) ring-trial. All three methods are applicable for DNA extracted from meat derived from horse and pork samples and demonstrate acceptable precision around the 1% (w/w) level for enforcement action. Furthermore, they can reliably distinguish between adventitious contamination at 0.1%, enforcement level at 1% and economically motivated adulteration at 10%.

The draft SOPs for the methods are available to prospective applicants and can be found on Bravo with the tender documents.

The Specification

Applicants are invited to submit tenders to plan a full-scale inter-laboratory collaborative trial on the methods that were developed under Defra project FA0171 on the quantitation of horse DNA in processed beef and pork DNA in raw and processed beef. The draft SOPs for the methods can be found on Bravo.

The proposed collaborative studies should follow the principals of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry (IUPAC) (IUPAC protocol on design, conduct and interpretation of collaborative studies)³ and the European Network of GMO laboratories (ENGL) (Definition of minimum performance requirements for analytical methods of GMO testing).⁴

When applying for this tender, applicants should demonstrate expertise in using real-time PCR on food matrices with appropriate accreditation and successful Proficiency Testing participation. Applicants should provide evidence of developing and establishing real-time PCR methods within their own laboratories and experience of running collaborative trials.

PHASE 1 - Interlaboratory trial (Dec 2021 – March 2022)

Step 1 - Establish methods within laboratory

The successful applicant (contractor) will need to demonstrate the three methods to be fit for purpose within their own laboratory for both the extraction and the quantitation of horse and pork DNA relative to beef DNA using real-time PCR.

A breakpoint in the contract will be added at this point. Project will continue on successful outcome of Step 1.

Step 2 - Inter-laboratory trials

For the inter-laboratory trials, the contractor will send DNA extracts to participating laboratories. For this the contractor will need to ensure authentic meat materials are sourced and gravimetrically prepared to certify their homogeneity, stability and precision prior to the full collaborative trial. Suitable adulteration levels should be considered to take into account adventitious to economically motivated levels. Assurance is required for efficient sample (DNA extracts) distribution to laboratories to avoid any delays.

The contractor should ensure appropriate number of suitably accredited laboratories (based either in UK or international) can be recruited to participate in the trial. Consideration should be given to any UK official enforcement laboratory participating in the trial on the provision of a financial contribution towards their time. The contractor may wish to consider whether any pre-trial training is required for participating laboratories prior to distributing samples for the main inter-laboratory trial.

PHASE 2 – Analysis and Report (Apr 2022 – August 2022)

Following the trial, the contractor should ensure all results are returned on time to allow adequate time for processing. Interpretation of results through statistical analysis is required to provide parameters for trueness and precision estimates (repeatability and reproducibility) in order to ensure results from the collaborative trial are fit for purpose, based on internationally acceptance guidance (e.g. IUPAC).

Deliverables

The outputs of this study will be the delivery of an interim report from Phase 1 of the project to include detail methodology, sample preparation, experimental design of the collaborative trial and a Final Project report from Phase 2 to conclude the outcome of the trial including statistical analysis and recommendations on the fitness for purpose of the method for consideration for CEN standardisation. The final report will be subject to external peer review, following which further amendments may be required. It is a requirement for Government reports to be made accessible⁵.

Schedule 3

Mark Sykes, Fera Science Ltd

The Agency is committed to openness and transparency. As well as the final project report being published on the Food Standards Agency website (www.food.gov.uk), we encourage contractors to publish their work in peer reviewed scientific publications wherever possible. Such material will need to be approved by the FSA prior to submission.

In addition to the final report, the contractor may consider updating/adjusting the original SOPs of the methods for greater clarity following feedback from laboratories. This should be discussed with the FSA. Contractor should hold regular update meetings with the FSA with a final meeting to disseminate the findings.

Costs

Financial breakdown is required for both phases of this study:

Phase 1 costs to include establishing the methods within the laboratory with a breakpoint at this stage, followed by the execution of collaborative trials* (including sourcing and preparation of authentic meat materials, sample distribution to laboratories, reimbursement of costs to UK official laboratories).

Phase 2 costs to include statistical analysis/interpretation and production of final report to the FSA.

*Cost should be provided for undertaking one, two and three trials for comparison as below

- (i) horse DNA in processed beef background
- (ii) pork DNA in raw beef background
- (iii) pork DNA in processed beef background

Any economies of scale applied in undertaking all three trials should be clarified. The FSA is looking for competitive bids which offer value for money understanding that 20% of our evaluation will be based on the Commercial (financial) envelope.
