

2.2.1.4 Outbuildings

Two outbuildings exist to the west of the main complex, both attributed to the workhouse expansion phase in the 19th century. The footprint of both are shown on mapping dating back to 1887.

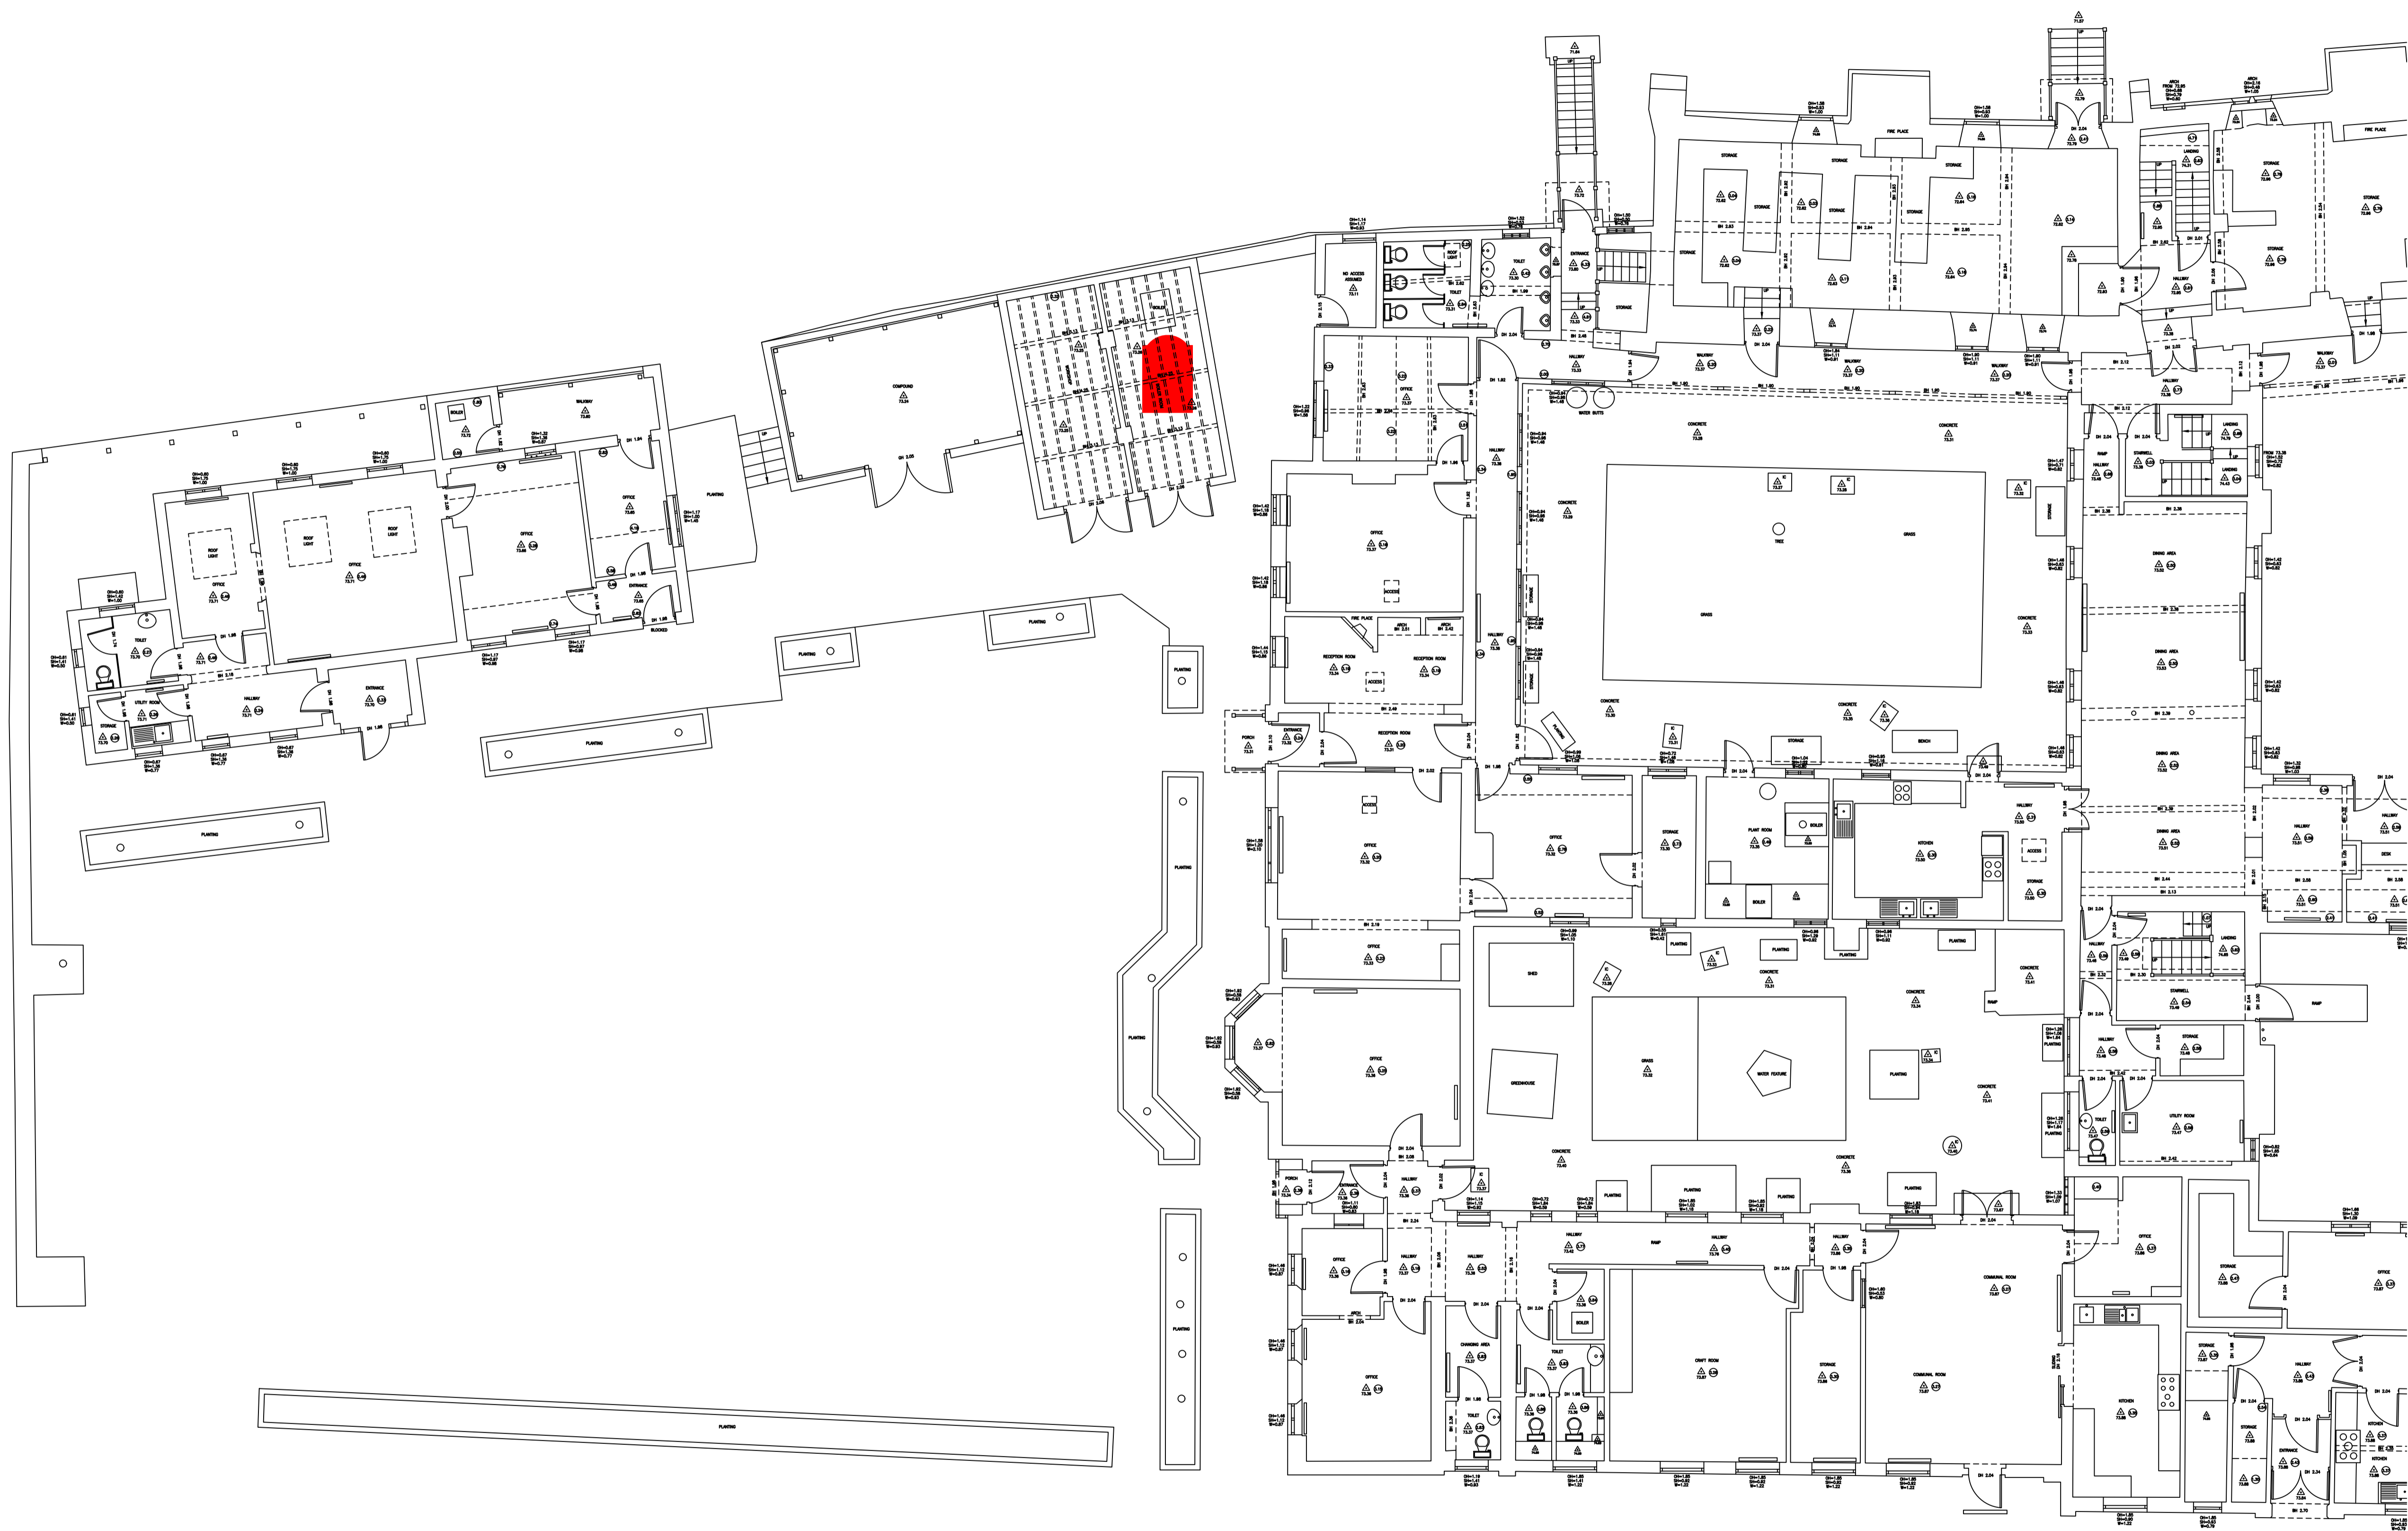

Both have seen extensive alteration since their construction. The larger former mortuary building to the west has been rendered and pebble-dashed, and a flat roof extension has been added wrapping around the south-east corner. Roof also appears to have been replaced and skylights added. The building retains no features of interest.

The smaller building to the east is brick built with pitched slate roof and large barn-style garage doors. Attached is a small enclosure bounded by a half-wall and wooden picket-style fence.

To the east end of the site, adjoining the medieval building to the east is a modern garage building, currently used for storage. The building is brick built with a green metal roof and timber windows and doors.
