14.5 the Contractor's liability under the indemnity in clause 18.3 shall be in no event exceed a sum equal to 500% of the Charges paid or payable to the Contractor

15. Force Majeure

15.1 Neither Party shall have any liability under or be deemed to be in breach of the Agreement for any delays or failures in performance of the Agreement which result from circumstances beyond the reasonable control of the Party affected. Each Party shall promptly notify the other Party in writing when such circumstances cause a delay or failure in performance and when they cease to do so. If such circumstances continue for a continuous period of more than two months, either Party may terminate the Agreement by written notice to the other Party.

16. Termination

16.1 The Customer may terminate the Agreement at any time by notice in writing to the Contractor to take effect on any date falling at least 1 month (or, if the Agreement is less than 3 months in duration, at least 10 Working Days) later than the date of service of the relevant notice.

- 16.2 Without prejudice to any other right or remedy it might have, the Customer may terminate the Agreement by written notice to the Contractor with immediate effect if the Contractor:
- 16.2.1 (without prejudice to clause 16.2.5), is in material breach of any obligation under the Agreement which is not capable of remedy;

17.2.1 comply with all the Customer's health and safety measures while on the Customer's premises; and

17.2.2 notify the Customer immediately in the event of any incident occurring in the performance of its obligations under the Agreement on the Customer's premises where that incident causes any personal injury or damage to property which could give rise to personal injury.

17.3 The Contractor shall:

17.3.1 perform its obligations under the Agreement in accordance with all applicable equality Law and the Customer's equality and diversity policy as provided to the Contractor from time to time; and

- 18.3.1 terminate the Agreement and recover from the Contractor the amount of any loss suffered by the Customer resulting from the termination, including the cost reasonably incurred by the Customer of making other arrangements for the supply of the Services and any additional expenditure incurred by the Customer throughout the remainder of the Agreement; or
- 18.3.2 recover in full from the Contractor any other loss sustained by the Customer in consequence of any breach of this clause.

19. Dispute Resolution

- 20.3 The Agreement cannot be varied except in writing signed by a duly authorised representative of both the Parties.
- 20.4 The Agreement contains the whole agreement between the Parties and supersedes and replaces any prior written or oral agreements, representations or understandings between them. The Parties confirm that they have not entered into the Agreement on the basis of any representation that is not expressly incorporated into the Agreement. Nothing in this clause shall exclude liability for fraud or fraudulent misrepresentation.
- 20.5 Any waiver or relaxation either partly, or wholly of any of the terms and conditions of the Agreement shall be valid only if it is communicated to the other Party in writing and expressly stated to be a waiver. Annex 2 - Specification

The Authority is the UK Government Department responsible for the environment, food and farming and rural affairs. The Authority's priorities are to secure a healthy natural environment; a sustainable, low-carbon economy; a thriving farming sector and a sustainable, healthy and secure food supply. Further information on the Authority can be found at: Defra.

Background

Biodiversity net gain (BNG) delivers measurable improvements for biodiversity by creating or enhancing habitats in association with development¹. BNG is fast gaining traction at policy, planning and industry level, and the government's 25 Year Environment Plan (25YEP) sets out the commitment to embed an environmental net gain principle for development including housing and infrastructure.²

Following a consultation at the start of the year, during the 2019 Spring Statement to the House of Commons it was confirmed that the government intends to proceed with a mandatory biodiversity net gain requirement through the Environment Bill³. Nationally Significant Infrastructure Projects (NSIPs) are proposed to remain out of scope of such a mandatory approach, as confirmed in the government's recent response to the consultation on biodiversity net gain. However in order to support the 25YEP net gain objective, there is a need to explore suitable approaches to BNG for infrastructure and to identify costs and benefits.

Many major infrastructure providers have existing commitments to achieve a biodiversity net gain outcome for some or all aspects of their activities including Network Rail and Highways England. However, unlike residential developments there is currently little or no nationally available data on the financial, social and environmental costs and benefits that any future biodiversity net gain requirement⁴ would entail in relation to major infrastructure projects. In particular, there is little evidence about whether there are situations and scenarios where achieving a biodiversity net gain would affect project finances. On one hand, achieving BNG is likely to require varying levels of financial input for mitigation activities and habitat creation. On the other hand a BNG requirement may provide clearer and more consistent expectations between developers and decision makers; speeding delivery and decisions, and reducing the costs associated with protracted negotiations for

¹ Net gain is an approach to development that aims to leave the natural environment in a measurably better state than beforehand. The onus is placed on the developer to either: protect existing habitats; and/or ensure any lost or degraded environmental features are more than compensated for by restoring or creating environmental features (assets or services) to have greater value to wildlife and people.

⁴ Noting that such projects are not currently envisaged as being subject to the proposed mandatory biodiversity net gain approach to be set out in the forthcoming Environment Bill biodiversity mitigation. BNG would also deliver social and economic benefits through ecosystem service provision.

Developing a robust evidence base on the potential costs and benefits relating to a range of possible future biodiversity net gain scenarios (in terms of % net gain requirements) for major infrastructure projects would help inform future policy and other approaches to this sector.

Further, the project is interested in assessing the extent to which biodiversity valuation and the benefits of BNG are appropriately factored into project appraisals. Understanding this may frame potential future policy directions and the development of future appraisal guidance.

Objectives

The over-arching aims of the project are to:

- i. Examine the effect of BNG on total project expenditure (e.g. capital, revenue, whole life costs) as a constituent part of the Financial Case for major infrastructure projects as defined by HM Treasury Guide to Developing the Project Business Case⁵. This will be based around an analysis of the financial impacts and benefits arising from the application of mandatory net gain policy to major infrastructure for a range of development scenarios.
- ii. Examine the effect of BNG on the Economic Case for major infrastructure projects, as defined by the HM Treasury Guide to Developing the Project Business Case. This will include an assessment on the effect of BNG on project benefit-cost ratios, by capturing the wider social and environmental benefits of net gain and any additional costs.
- iii. Examine the extent to which project business cases incorporate biodiversity valuation, and which valuation methods are used to do so. The project is interested in highlighting and discussing case studies which demonstrate good practice in biodiversity valuation, and making recommendations for further research or guidance as appropriate.

The project will be split into three work packages (WP) reflecting each aim outlined above.

WP1. Project Expenditure - Net Gain scenarios

The project will identify and analyse the actual or likely financial impact of biodiversity net gain upon expenditure for nationally significant infrastructure projects (NSIPs) as defined by the Planning Act (2008) and other 'major' infrastructure projects of equal or greater significance (in terms of geographic scale and cost) but which may fall outside of the scope of this Act. This analysis should be done for the most common infrastructure development scenarios in England, which are likely to include;

- linear and non-linear infrastructure
- development in high economic growth and low economic growth areas
- development in affluent and within deprived regions

N.B. – other common scenarios could be considered

The study will work with developers of current or past major infrastructure projects, and with any published and business data (from current or past projects) to:

- establish baseline project expenditure (i.e. capital, revenue, whole life costs); and
- explore a series of net gain scenarios to test the effect of biodiversity net gain on total project expenditure.

There are a number of reports available which may be of use when looking to identify appropriate benchmarks or baselines for total project expenditure^{6,7,8,9}.

The project will base biodiversity net gain calculations upon the updated Defra Biodiversity Metric 2.0.¹⁰ Biodiversity net gain is assumed to have occurred when a biodiversity unit calculation gain of at least +5% above the baseline has been calculated.

The project is interested in testing the financial impact of a biodiversity net gain requirement on development in the following range of biodiversity net gain scenarios, as calculated using the Defra Biodiversity Metric 2.0:

1. a 5% biodiversity unit gain above baseline
2. a 10% biodiversity unit gain above baseline
3. a 20% biodiversity unit gain above baseline

The project may also be interested in including a no net loss (NNL) scenario in addition to the above.

¹⁰ <http://publications.naturalengland.org.uk/publication/5850908674228224>

The analysis would capture a full range of major infrastructure projects located within or partially within the terrestrial and intertidal zones, down to the mean low water mark. Work is currently underway to incorporate intertidal habitats into the Defra Biodiversity Metric 2.0, and it is anticipated that this work will be completed in time to allow these habitats to be factored in to the analyses.

The project will examine the financial impact of biodiversity net gain delivered in the above range of scenarios:

- entirely within the development 'red line'
- entirely through the use of offsite delivery via biodiversity offsetting
- a combination of the above.

Bids should also explore the potential to examine the financial impact of delivering net gain:

- By factoring in net gain requirements at options appraisal and design stages
- by 'retrofitting' net gain requirements into existing project designs
- through strategic delivery with other coinciding infrastructure projects or large residential developments.

Summary of variables for net gain scenarios

Variable	Levels/categories
Level of net gain	Baseline, 5%, 10%, 20%
Location of net gain delivery	Redline – Inside, outside, combination
Type of infrastructure	Linear, non-linear
Timing of BNG introduction to design process	Options appraisal/design, 'retrofitting'
Project collaboration in BNG delivery	Strategic collaboration, project-by-project

WP2. Economic Case

The project should fully consider financial, social and environmental benefits arising from the application of net gain to major infrastructure projects.

The study should, where available, assess data used for actual project appraisals to inform benefit-cost ratios for infrastructure projects which have received development consent.

Using this data as a baseline, the project should then assess the effect of achieving 5%, 10% and 20% net gain for biodiversity on the overall cost-benefit ratio for linear and non-linear infrastructure. The results of this analysis will be aggregated and suitably anonymised, except where discussing specific case studies.

Alternatively, if this data cannot be obtained, modelling should be undertaken to assess the effect of achieving 5%, 10% and 20% net gain for biodiversity on project cost-benefit ratios, using available data for baselining and suitable assumptions regarding the extent and type of habitat loss and replacement for linear and non-linear infrastructure, and the change in natural capital benefits which will flow from this. Steering group members with access to suitable expertise or experience may be able to advise in relation to this process.

The project may also be interested in including a no net loss (NNL) scenario in addition to the above.

A requirement for development to achieve a certain level of net gain results in consistent expectations, and has the capacity to save time and costs, including in relation to protracted negotiations on mitigation for biodiversity mitigation. The analysis should appropriately include any cost and time-saving benefits arising from a requirement for BNG applied to major infrastructure. This should factor-in consideration of the development consent process, which has specific timeframes for decision-making.

The outcome of the analysis should provide a range for typical benefit-cost ratios for infrastructure projects which are subject to BNG requirements.

Further, total benefits derived from net gain, including any which are not possible to quantify, should be broken down by beneficiary - i.e. the developer, operator, or wider society.

All analyses should adhere to the following standards:

- The Green Book: appraisal and evaluation in central government¹¹, including key supplementary annexes and guidance where relevant (e.g. environmental and natural capital, optimism bias, transport, business case guidance); and
- The Aqua Book: guidance on producing quality analysis for government.¹²

¹² <https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/the-aqua-book-guidance-on-producing-quality-analysis-for-government>

WP3. Biodiversity Valuation

The Green Book and supporting documents provide a best practice resource for project appraisal. They include guidance for the evaluation of environmental factors including biodiversity.

The study should assess the extent to which real project business cases for major infrastructure projects have appropriately incorporated valuation of biodiversity, as distinct from any natural capital benefits which flow from biodiversity enhancements or net gain delivery, and as a resource which underpins the delivery of many of these natural capital benefits. This exercise should also record which if any projects have explicitly set out to achieve no net loss of biodiversity or a net gain in biodiversity. This information could be gathered as part of the baselining exercise for WP2.

For each project included, the assessment should consider whether biodiversity valuation is absent from the appraisal, included at a high-level, or investigated in-depth. The methods used for valuation, as described by the Green Book, should be recorded. The results of this assessment will be aggregated and suitably anonymised.

The project is also interested in highlighting any case studies which demonstrate good practice for valuation of biodiversity for infrastructure project business cases. Cases should be discussed in the context of the valuation methods used and outcomes. This exercise should provide recommendations for any further investigations, resources or guidance which may be necessary to fully account for impacts to and benefits derived from biodiversity in appraisal and valuation for infrastructure development.

Analysis and investigation

- Undertake an initial evidence/literature review and gather data relating to costs of delivering a range of potential Net Gain outcomes from on the ground experience
- Agree the key development scenarios in which to test for the financial impact of biodiversity net gain outcomes
- Analyse the financial effect of BNG on total project expenditure for infrastructure projects for the agreed range of scenarios
- Assess the effect of BNG for major infrastructure projects on benefit-cost ratios
- Assess the extent which biodiversity is factored in to real project appraisals, provide any case studies of good practice and make recommendations for future work

Tasks

Meetings and milestones:

- Attend project inception meeting and agree project scope (likely w/c 30th September in London, venue tbc);
- Create a project plan;

- Interim project meeting (teleconference) with report and interim conclusions;
- Produce a set of final conclusions within a final report;
- Present results to project steering group (by w/c 3rd February, face-to face in London, venue tbc).

Outside of the meetings scheduled the contractor and named project lead (see main point of contact details below) will hold weekly telecalls to keep abreast of progress and flag any issues that arise.

Outputs (and format)

The project outputs are to be produced in a written final report in word format (and any accompanying visuals/graphics, spreadsheets/models etc). The final report may use the EVID4 format as a template or guide. At a minimum, the final report should include clear and detailed descriptions of the agreed project objectives, methodology, findings and conclusions.

The report should include recommendations on the need for any future investigations, guidance or resources to embed biodiversity valuation in project appraisal for infrastructure development.
