STATEMENT OF REQUIREMENT FOR NOISE MEASUREMENT FOR INM SUPPORT OF HMS QUEEN ELIZABETH FIRST OF CLASS FLYING TRIALS (FIXED WING) – DATA ACQUISITION SYSTEM

Background

1. The INM has been tasked to measure noise during F-35B Lightning II First of Class Flying Trials (FOCFT(FW)) Phase 1 (Development Trials (DT) 1 and 2). The aim being to undertake appropriate noise exposure measurements on the flight deck, weather decks and within HMS Queen Elizabeth (QNLZ) in order to fully assess the exposure to noise of personnel working on the new QE class aircraft carriers.
2. The equipment is also likely to be used for further Development Trials on HMS QNLZ.

Requirement

3. The INM is seeking to acquire specialist noise recording equipment to the value of approx. £25,000 in readiness for DT 1 which begins in September 2018.
4. Failure to procure the equipment in the above timescales will delay INM's ability to conduct a full assessment of the impact of F35B noise levels on personnel, both on the flight deck and within the ship. Therefore, it would not be possible to determine if personnel, whether working in direct or indirect vicinity of the F35B, are exposed to levels above statutory limits. Thus, DES Ships and the Duty Holder would be unable to satisfy themselves that mandated obligations in accordance with the Control of Noise at Work Regulations have been met and that personnel exposure is being appropriately managed.

Statement of Requirement

5. There is a need for a dedicated computer-based data acquisition measurement system for noise. The general and detailed specifications for the system are as follows:

- Acquire data on multiple channels simultaneously (using sample and hold facility)
- Minimum of 16 channels
- Potential to expand number of channels in future is preferred
- Minimum sampling rate of 100 kHz per channel
- Input different types of transducers via LEMO or BNC connectors (eg. microphones and accelerometers)
- Potential for powering transducers (eg. microphones) without need for external amplification is preferred
- Mains and/or battery powered operation (ie. so that the system could be used where no mains power was available)
- Ability to use system on battery power for long periods (eg. 8 hours) – replaceable rechargeable battery packs may be suitable, for example
- Portable and rugged, for use in remote and harsh environments
- Check data stream in real-time using a remote control unit or other software
- Rugged, portable data acquisition interface for control and monitoring of system.
- Ability to acquire 'pre-trigger' data (ie. N seconds of data before record is pressed) for capturing surprise events is preferred
- Record time histories of noise and vibration data (typically using WAV files)
- Export data to MATLAB for analysis
- Data acquisition either to internal memory (typically require at least 60 GB) or via connected laptop

Business Case for Non-Competition

1. The supplier Prosig would be able to supply equipment to meet the above specification. Extensive research has shown that the main commercially-available competitor (Brüel & Kjær)
2. would not be able to fulfil the requirements on grounds of cost, and would also not be as easily extended for future projects.

2. Additionally, the INM acoustics and vibration section currently owns licences and equipment for the Prosig software. Therefore the new equipment would augment current capabilities and reduce the familiarisation time required by INM staff. Thus, the time required for delivery and familiarisation would be minimal, while maximising the capability that INM can offer to FOCFT(FW).

6. The above specifications must be met by any proposed equipment.

7. It is requested that the equipment is supplied by July 2018 (or August 2018 at the latest) in order that INM staff can be trained and test the equipment in readiness for the DT 1 trial which begins in September 2018.

8. There are no security considerations with the procurement of this equipment.
