Background

The research is set in the context of the new Financing Net Zero programme (FNZ), which is soon to be launched by Innovate UK. FNZ is a £15m programme with the ambition to accelerate finance in to 'Climate Tech'¹. Interventions are being designed to address the huge gap between the current scale of climate tech investment and that needed for the UK to meet its decarbonisation and economic goals.

The requirement is to perform a series of rapid studies aligned with 'deep-dive' net zero sectors or technologies. These are:

1. Domestic building retrofit
2. Energy whole systems integration, in particular the use of digital technologies and platforms
3. Circular critical materials, specifically Rare Earth Elements
4. Hydrogen supply chains for distribution and storage.

Focusing on the investment ecosystem and investment challenges in each deep dive area, studies are expected to build on existing information and convene dissemination roundtables to produce the desired research outputs.

The impact of this research is expected to be an improvement in design of FNZ. In particular the activities related to addressing barriers for investors and understanding Innovate UK's role in accelerating net zero finance.

As a pre-study it is also expected to lay foundations for future research, which may deepen the analysis in one of the deep dive sectors, expand in to other sectors, and also look deeper at specific investment challenges that cut across different sectors.

Aims and Objectives of the Project

The overall aim of this research is to quickly enhance Innovate UK's understanding of the challenges and barriers to scaling investment in climate tech. It is expected to provide insight on which barriers the FNZ programme can realistically address and the appropriate intervention mechanisms for doing so. The research is needed as this is a new intervention area for Innovate UK and internal knowledge is spread between finance or domain expertise (e.g. in transport, or energy), with little overlap between the two. The research will fill this knowledge gap to enable better programme design.

Another aim is to establish a network of contacts within each deep dive sector, helping to develop the net zero investment ecosystem in the UK. The target groups are investors, who may either be active in the sector already or considering the sector as a new investment opportunity. Other key ecosystem partners may also be approached, for example corporates, consultancies, industry groups, or financial stakeholders, e.g. banks or pension funds.

The research will be framed around the 4 specific deep dive sectors. For each deep dive the following specific research questions need to be addressed:

- 1. What does the current investment landscape look like:
 - a. Spread across the types of investment, from early stage seed funding to late stage growth equity or project finance?
 - b. What are the trends?

¹ For a definition of 'Climate Tech' see, for example: State of Climate Tech 2021 \(pwc.com\)

- What investment barriers could Innovate UK (including Catapults, KTN) realistically address?
- What intervention mechanisms would be appropriate?
- Is there anything else Innovate UK can do with linked organisations e.g. British Business Bank, UK Infrastructure Bank?

Suggested Methodology

Building on the framing exercise, evidence will then need to be gathered with the aim of addressing the first set of research questions focused on the investment landscape.

Outputs from this phase will need to be prepared appropriately for use in phase 3.

Phase 3: Dissemination roundtable

Dissemination roundtables will then be held, to present the results of evidence gathering and allow deeper scrutiny of the information presented. Roundtables are expected to involve key investor and ecosystem stakeholders, who will have been identified in answer to research question 1c, as well as representatives from Innovate UK. The aim is to address the second and third set of research questions focused on investment challenges and the need for intervention.

One roundtable per deep dive sector will be held. It is expected that each roundtable will last between 0.5 and 1 working day. Allowances should be made to appropriately capture research outputs.

Phase 4: Reporting

Gathering research outputs and producing deliverables. Final reporting is expected to be light touch and in PowerPoint format. The requirement is not to produce lengthy reports for external publication. If necessary additional data used for the analysis can be provided as an annex to a main report.

Deliverables

Three deliverables for each deep dive sector:

1. A sector roundtable event
2. A report in PowerPoint format providing the key findings of the research, including framing, evidence gathering and outputs from the roundtables, plus all related data used in the analysis
3. A contacts list of organisations consulted during the research.

Four deep dives will produce 12 deliverables in total.

Terms and Conditions

Bidders are to note that any requested modifications to the Contracting Authority Terms and Conditions on the grounds of statutory and legal matters only, shall be raised as a formal clarification during the permitted clarification period.
