Active Company Check

Verifying that a commercial organization is who they say they are and is actively trading helps to ensure that grants are allocated to the right businesses whilst reducing the risk of fraud and error. The Active Company Check solution makes it quicker and easier for you to verify the existence of a business based on a number of corroborated commercial data sources. This provides increased confidence that the details you have been provided with are accurate, and that the company is active. For simplicity, the service has been configured to return a 1-10 risk flag to help determine if the company is actively trading. This information should be taken into consideration to help expedite payments to eligible businesses. Metadata is also provided to assist you with your upfront and post-event assurance checks

Experian will take a business application and match the supplied details to our databases using a combination of Company Registration Number (where provided) and business name and address details. Where a business has been successfully matched to our database, we will verify that business exists by corroborating all the instances where we see the data appear on our own data or contributor sources.

Experian will evaluate the matched data and return the following to help evaluate the application together with associated data to provide additional insight:

- Verification score: this includes business logic which will be adapted for DWP to include an agreed active date in the past as the key date, i.e. the date in the past to check that a company was already in existence. The verification confidence score is calculated based on the results of matching
- Data Quality Scores: we have provided insight around the quality of the input data to provide a level of confidence around the data fields we have received, so whether a record is unmatched and we can't locate it on any data sources, no Company Registration Number (CRN) or address for example.
- Suspicious Indicator Flag: to mitigate fraud and bring attention to these applicants, we will process the data against a set of suspicious indicators, including those for impersonation fraud and disqualified directors, plus extending the reach to include those that identify irregularities and inconsistencies in the way a business presents itself publicly and the way it actually behaves and trades. • Adverse indicators: in addition to the above indicators, it may be useful to understand additional insight on the company around adverse indicators which present cause for concern particularly when seen in conjunction with other suspicious indicators. These indicators can include dormant accounts, unsatisfied CCJ's. Pricing: Processing fee: [Redacted] Price per check: [Redacted] Volumes: Minimum volume commitment of 12,000 checks and 75 batches over the course of the agreement.
