The Authority is the UK Government Department responsible for the environment, food and farming and rural affairs. The Authority's priorities are to secure a healthy natural environment; a sustainable, low-carbon economy; a thriving farming sector and a sustainable, healthy and secure food supply. Further information on the Authority can be found at: Defra.

Aim of project

The primary purpose of this research is scope the feasibility of estimating the full costs of invasive non-native species (INNS) through a natural capital/ecosystem services lens. The research should draw upon the latest evidence and thinking to investigate the potential for identifying, quantifying and monetising a broader range of impacts than have previously been considered. Building on this, the research should consider whether a full assessment of the economic, environmental and social effects on human welfare of the impacts of INNS on natural capital and ecosystem services would be practical and feasible, and propose how this may be undertaken.

Context

Policy, legislation, and international commitments

Following internationally recognised principles and priorities of prevention, rapid eradication and management, the GB Invasive Non-Native Species Strategy¹ (GBINNS) operates to ensure coordinated action across Great Britain. The 25 Year Environment Plan (25YEP) commits to continuing to deliver the GBINNS and sets out a series of aims in relation to INNS including:

- Developing plans to reduce the risk from all high priority pathways for INNS introduction into England;
- Working with partners to raise awareness of invasive non-native species;
- The need for strong biosecurity and maintaining an alert system to detect high priority INNS and implement contingency plans to rapidly eradicate them where feasible.

¹ First published in 2008, reviewed in 2015

The legislative framework underpinning these aims comprises four main pillars:

1. The EU Regulation 1143/2014 on Invasive Alien Species, which entered into force on January 1 2015. The Regulation applies strict restrictions on a list of species such that they cannot be imported, kept, bred, transported, sold, used or exchanged, allowed to reproduce, grown or cultivated, or released into the environment.	2. The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 (as amended) makes it illegal to release or allow to escape into the wild any animal which is not ordinarily resident in Great Britain and is not a regular visitor to Great Britain in a wild state, or is listed in Schedule 9 to the Act. It is also illegal to plant or otherwise cause to grow in the wild any plant listed in Schedule 9 to the Act.	3. Section 23 of the Infrastructure Act 2015 inserted a new Schedule 9A to the Wildlife and Countryside Act to enable species control agreements and orders to be made by environmental authorities to ensure that landowners take action on invasive non-native species, or permit others to enter the land and carry out those operations, to prevent their establishment and spread.	4. Local councils and the Police have the power to issue Community Protection Notices (CPNs) under the Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014. Requiring individuals or businesses to control or prevent the breeding, growth or spread of an invasive species can be achieved via a CPN.
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

The UK is also a signatory to international conventions that require action to tackle INNS.

- Under the Convention on Biological Diversity, Target 9 of the Strategic Plan is that by 2020, invasive alien species and pathways are identified and prioritized, priority species are controlled or eradicated, and measures are in place to manage pathways to prevent their introduction and establishment.
- The Bern Convention is a binding international legal instrument whose aims are to conserve wild flora and fauna and their natural habitats. Under the Convention, a European Strategy on invasive alien species provides a framework for action, including encouraging the development of national strategies.

Natural capital and the current evidence base

The 25YEP (p.64) states that “We will continue to deliver the GB Invasive Non-native Species Strategy (2015) in order to protect natural capital in England from invasive non-native species”. The principles of a natural capital approach are embedded throughout the plan. This approach emphasises the need to understand the full value of the benefits to human welfare offered by the natural environment, and to incorporate that into the decisions we take.

The conceptual framework set out in the evidence annex to the plan, categorises the environment into a number of ‘assets’ which combine in varying ways to provide a suite of services and benefits from which we derive wellbeing. These assets and benefits are part of an open and highly interdependent system which are influenced by a wide range of ‘external’ drivers and pressures and ‘internal’ policy or management interventions.

INNS can have considerable economic impact. Previous research (CABI, 2010) has estimated the cost of INNS in Great Britain to be at least £1.7 billion per year. The vast majority of the costs quantified in this study were direct market costs, such as the money spent on control measures or the reduction in productivity due to the presence of an INNS.² However, INNS can also have a broader range of impacts on natural capital assets and the ecosystem services they provide, which themselves affect not just the economic but also the consequent environmental and social benefits to human welfare. Many of these impacts will affect values not measured in typical economic markets, such as aesthetic or recreation values. CABI (2010) noted that studies that included non-market costs had estimates that were on average 57 times higher than studies that did not, indicating that market costs represent only a small proportion of the total economic cost of INNS.

A greater understanding of the economic, environmental and social effects of INNS will help to ensure that resources are targeted in the most efficient and effective manner. Though it is noted, that by their nature, these values can be more challenging to understand and account for.

Detailed Project Requirements/key research questions

Bidders should consider how far existing research goes in identifying, quantifying, and monetising the full impacts of INNS on the economic, environmental and social benefits that are provided to human welfare by natural capital assets and ecosystem services flows. Bidders should describe how they would draw upon this evidence and the natural capital literature to develop a framework which identifies, maps and categorises these impacts appropriately.

Building on this understanding and mapping of the evidence, the key research questions are as follows:

- What are the main impacts of INNS on natural capital assets and ecosystem services flows?
- Is it possible to estimate the full cost to human welfare of INNS through a 'natural capital lens'? What would this look like?
- How far does existing research go in identifying, quantifying, and monetising the impacts of INNS on natural capital and ecosystem services flows? Is it feasible to robustly quantify and monetise more of these impacts?
- Does the evidence provide an indication of where current action should be targeted in order to avoid future costs? This should include consideration the relative benefits and costs of early eradication vs. delayed eradication.
- How might a full assessment of the human welfare cost of INNS be carried out, and what resource would be required?

Guidance on approach and key success factors

The focus of this work should be on testing the feasibility of updating previous cost estimates in a more comprehensive fashion. In approaching this project, bidders should consider how to manage their time appropriately, for example by focusing on high cost species, or strongly affected sectors.

² It was not within the scope of this project to carry out additional research to quantify the costs of the natural capital impacts of INNS.

Critical consideration should also be given to the question of whether the natural capital/ecosystem services framework is the most appropriate approach to assessing the full impacts of INNS on human welfare.

The following items are suggested as key tasks to undertake, but we welcome alternative or further suggestions.

- Desk research and evidence synthesis – review of legal and policy documents, studies, reports, and other written evidence;
- Workshop/s to identify and map impacts
