Schedule 1: Services

For the Services being delivered as per the Order Form, the Supplier has provided more detail through the Clarification process. The Charges for these Services are covered in Schedule 2.

Migration to new GovPress infrastructure

The Supplier will migrate both sites under the provision to their new containerised infrastructure. This infrastructure will provide the Judiciary with their own cluster, allowing sharing of allocated resources across all sites within the cluster. It will allow the Supplier to setup up a load testing environment on an ad-hoc basis, without the need for significant support/operations time. This will allow the Supplier to put auto-scaling in place to automatically adjust capacity to maintain the Judicial Office's sites' performance in response to changes in demand.

The migration will require some time from both the Supplier's development and technical operations teams to ensure the infrastructure is set up correctly and the sites are able to be moved across. The costs for this are included in Schedule 2 below, as are the costs for a small contingency budget for the Supplier to adjust the service's capacity as the traffic profile changes over time.

Proposed Infrastructure

Service	Instance type/size	Database type/size judiciary.uk	3 x t3.medium	1 x db.t3.large
Intranet	9 x t3.medium ₁	1 x db.t3.2xlarge ₂

Development Sprints and User Research

As the sites require iteration over time, the Supplier have priced 7 optional Sprint Call-Offs into their Service offering for sizeable work. These optional Sprints will be subject to scheduling and further approval from the Judicial Office. In addition, within the proposal the Supplier have costed for 20 days of user research capability to help better understand the user needs for a redesigned website. The costs for the Sprints and for the User Research are covered in Schedule 2.

Hosting, maintenance and support for Judiciary.uk and for Judiciary Intranet

All sites hosted on GovPress and their backups are on UK-based servers through AWS. All sites run in independent containers, whether they're on shared or dedicated infrastructure. Sites only ever have access to their own file systems and code. We also ensure separation at the database level, through permissions - each site only has access to its own data.

All sites running on GovPress are monitored, maintained and updated in line with the latest secure WordPress release and our maintenance service includes:

- WordPress Core updates
- Uptime monitoring
- Load balancing
- Online vulnerability scanning
- Daily backups
- WordPress Plugin updates

Notwithstanding an issue with AWS that is beyond the Supplier's control, the Supplier's Recovery Point Objective is normally 25 hours. In most situations, but dependent on the data loss, the Supplier would hope their RPO would be significantly lower. The Supplier's Recovery Time Objective is normally 4 hours. Assuming there is no catastrophic event affecting AWS more widely, in the event of an issue occurring, the Supplier will start working to fix any issue immediately. Issues will be treated as a support ask and the Supplier's support and technical operations teams will work to resolve any issues in line with the Supplier's SLA.

The Supplier offers support as part of GovPress and normally recommend at least 4 hours per month for sites on dedicated infrastructure, but this can be scaled up or down according to the Judicial Office's needs. The Supplier have quoted for 2 hours for each site which can be shared across both sites as required. The Supplier will review support usage on a quarterly basis and can adjust allowances in line with actual usage. The Judicial Office will have access to an online ticketing system, which is monitored by a helpdesk manager and support engineer. The Supplier have offered a Service Level Agreement in working hours (10am - 6pm) of:

- responses to urgent tickets within 1 hour
- responses to normal tickets within 8 hours
- we typically respond quicker than this to clients, particularly if there's a critical issue. For instance, in the last month, our average reply time to all tickets is under 2 hours.

Tickets are defined as urgent if the problem they describe relates to a production system which is completely unavailable, or whose performance is so poor as to render the service unusable; A production system may have been compromised by an attacker and that the suspected attack or its impact is ongoing. Urgent tickets must receive a first reply within 1 hour (standard) or 30 minutes (enhanced), at any time of the day or night.

Tickets created by emailing emergency-support@dxw.com are automatically marked as urgent.

Tickets are defined as high priority if the problem they describe relates to a production system which has stopped performing adequately; and that loss in performance is resulting in a serious reduction in the usability or usefulness of the hosted service. "Performance" in this context does not exclusively refer to the speed of response. It also refers to the correctness of responses. For example, if an important feature of a site is responsive but has ceased to work correctly, that is also a loss in performance. High priority tickets must receive a first reply within 1 working hour (standard) or 30 working minutes (enhanced).

Tickets are defined as normal priority if they are not low priority, urgent or critical. Normal priority tickets must receive a first reply within 8 working hours (standard) or 4 working hours (enhanced).

Tickets are defined as low priority if they are background requests for information or offhand enquiries; Requests for work where a delay has little or no impact on service. Low priority tickets must receive initial and subsequent replies within 5 business days. Any support query can be triaged and delegated to either 2nd or 3rd line support. The main difference between 2nd and 3rd line support is how long it takes to resolve the query.

The GovPress platform is penetration tested on an annual basis and the Supplier's latest test report can be viewed by the Buyer on request. The Supplier recommend that it is good practice for the Buyer to conduct penetration testing on all their own sites annually. The Supplier requests for 3 days' notice for this, so that it won't block any unusual traffic from testers. The Supplier can also share recommendations for agencies they have used for penetration testing.

Security controls within the GovPress platform include: Security controls include:

- GovPress managed deployments
- Online vulnerability scanning
- Malicious activity scanning against live threat intelligence feeds.
- Proactive monitoring
- In-house WordPress security expertise

One of the most common issues with WordPress sites is lack of maintenance. Part of the GovPress maintenance regime is timely updates to Core. For WordPress security updates, the Supplier patches sites within 24 hours of release and will manage updates to the Judicial Office's plugins. The Supplier also requires the dxw extras plugin on all sites it hosts and maintains. This is a plugin that the Supplier actively maintains, which tightens security issues with default WordPress sites. As part of maintenance, the Supplier will test and apply infrastructure and WordPress core and plugin updates by default. For security updates to WordPress core, the Supplier will apply those within 24 hours of release. For other non-critical updates, the Supplier applies these within 14 days.

The Supplier also maintains their ISO27001 accreditation and Cyber Essentials certification. Further to being ISO27001 certified, the Supplier will be the data processor for the Service and will provide a data protection officer who will be the point of contact to ensure GDPR compliance. For more information, the Supplier's Data Processing Agreement can be found in their standard terms on GCloud under ServiceID 765520339913711.

The Supplier's hosting is designed to avoid single points of failure other than the database by default. The Supplier uses AWS ECS (Elastic Container Service) to manage containers running on a cluster of EC2 instances in an Auto Scaling Group (ASG) of which there will always be at least 2 instances. The instances are spread across all 2 Availability Zones (AZs) in the London region. This means that there is no single point of failure within a cluster since ECS and the ASG will make sure there is always the right number of containers and instances. The Supplier uses CloudFront and AWS Application Load Balancers (ALB) to route traffic to the containers. These should not be a single point of failure. Uploads are stored on AWS Elastic File System (EFS) which is fault-tolerant. Outgoing traffic passes through AWS Nat Gateways which are also fault-tolerant.

The Supplier expects the Services to be available 100% of the time unless a period of scheduled maintenance is underway. The Supplier acknowledges that anything less than 100% availability is a lapse in the expected Service Level. In reality, with any real-world system involving components and connectivity, there is no such thing as perfect reliability. However, if despite the Supplier's best efforts, the platform becomes unavailable as a result of a failure of a component that the Supplier controls, the Supplier will refund the fees paid to the Supplier for the provision of the hosting service for any period of downtime longer than 1 hour, on a pro-rata basis.

Setup and Hosting the Judiciary intranet load-testing environment

The Supplier will provide a load-testing environment to test the effects of any changes they make to the site code. The Supplier's estimates for setting up the environment and hosting it are included in Schedule 2. Should the Judicial Office require the load-testing environment at any point during the contract, they can raise a request through the Supplier's support desk. After the initial setup has been completed, the Supplier should be able to make the environment available with half a day's notice. Billing for the load-testing environment will be calculated on a pro-rata basis per day until the Supplier receives notice that the Judicial Office want to take environment down. During a period where the load-testing environment is available to the Judicial Office, the environment will be supported under the support contracts already in place. However, the environment will not create alerts out-of-hours, and in the case of any wider infrastructure issues, the Supplier will prioritise the Judicial Office's live environments over and above load-testing.

Non-Functional Requirements

The Supplier and the Buyer have agreed non-functional requirements for the Services being delivered by this contract. These have been included in this Schedule.

Schedule 2: Call-Off Contract charges
