Specification & Proposal

[illegible]

1. Background

To support this ambition, HEE has been increasing social mobility in access to medical schools. Working with a range of partners, HEE has supported over 1500 disadvantaged school students in seeking to gain a place on undergraduate medical courses by participating in summer school programmes. The support begins in Year 12 and is continued until the students graduate from university and enter employment.

The medical profession remains a challenging profession for young people from less advantaged backgrounds to break into, with research consistently showing an over-representation of doctors who were educated at independent schools, which educate only seven per cent of the British population.

Barriers to the profession include the obvious point that entry to medical school is a highly competitive process with high grades required, which students from wealthier backgrounds and independent schools are in a stronger position to achieve relative to their less advantaged peers. There are other factors like the importance of undertaking relevant work experience, soft skills development and receiving informal mentoring and advice that are harder from students from poorer backgrounds to access.

The underrepresentation of talented doctors from less advantaged backgrounds, who have the potential to pursue a medical career but may not be able to make competitive applications for medical schools, means a waste of talent that the NHS could otherwise be benefiting from. This makes widening access to the medical profession crucially important in the coming years, particularly as the health service builds back after the impact of the pandemic.

2. Project requirements

The target is for circa 50 students (one cohort of students recruited at the start of Year 12) to be recruited in 2021/2022 go through the Access to Medicine programme, with locations including hard to reach social mobility cold spots (according to the Social Mobility Commission's State of the Nation report in July 2021) across the Yorkshire and Humber region.

3. Additional targets/aims

- Students to be recruited as per social mobility eligibility status, for example, free school meals eligible, first generation in their family to attend university, living in a neighborhood or attend a school with low progression rates to higher education or have been looked after or in care.
- Ensure that Access to Medicine programmes are accessible to all students who are eligible to apply and that the cohorts of students are representative of the regions and communities they come from.
- BAME applicants – target is no less than 60% BAME

The core programme needs to include the following:

- Skills session
- University events such as:
  - Interview workshops.

  - Personal statement and CV-writing workshops.
  - Practical sessions.

Part B Data Protection Protocol

Processing, Personal Data and Data Subjects

1 Description of the processing to be undertaken by the Supplier

1.1 Scope

The Sutton Trust runs Pathways to Medicine in partnership with four university delivery partners (Imperial College London, Hull-York Medical School, the University of Nottingham and Newcastle University), meaning that student information is stored by both the Sutton Trust and the respective university delivery partner the student takes the programme with. We have data sharing agreements in place with all our university partners. Our delivery partners may share updates on student information for our records and may share their own data privacy policies with students.

We respect students' right to privacy and only process personal information provided to us in accordance with the UK's version of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and the UK's data protection act.

The Sutton Trust's privacy policy can be viewed in its entirety on our website.

1.2 Nature

We take the security of student data very seriously and ensure appropriate technical and organisational measures are in place to protect it against unauthorised or unlawful processing and against accidental loss, destruction or damage. Student data is always, at a minimum, password protected with the number of staff who can access it restricted to those for whom access is strictly necessary for the relevant processing.

Student data is stored on a CRM system called Salesforce and the Sutton Trust's own shared drive. IT providers have access to personal information stored on these systems. IT providers are under contract with us as a data processor, meaning that they cannot use student data for their own processes.

Under the Data Protection Act (1998) and the General Data Protection Regulation (2018), students have the following rights in relation to the personal data we hold:

1. To be informed about the data we hold and what we do with it.
2. To access to the data we hold. More information on this can be found in our policy on Subject Access Requests.
3. For any inaccuracies in the data we hold, however they come to light, to be corrected. This is also known as 'rectification'.
4. To have data deleted in certain circumstances. This is also known as 'erasure'.
5. To restrict the processing of the data.
6. To transfer the data we hold to another party. This is also known as 'portability'.
7. To object to the inclusion of any information.
8. To regulate any automated decision-making and profiling of personal data.

1.3 Purpose of Processing

The Sutton Trust collects student data in order to:

- Process student applications.
- Assess student eligibility for the programme, in line with the specified criteria.
- Allow delivery partners to contact students with their decisions and confirm students' places on the programme.
- Deliver the elements of the programme run by the Sutton Trust.
- Evaluate the programme's effectiveness and impact on students.

1.4 Duration of the Processing

The Sutton Trust stores student applications for one academic year following their completion of the programme to respond to queries that may arise during this period. Following this, the Sutton Trust deletes students' applications but stores information needed to track education outcomes, including name, date of birth, school, postcode and contact details in order to send students' surveys. We also keep information on students' eligibility for the programme. This data is then broken down into:

Successful applicants – we retain the name, date of birth, programme attended and educational outcomes for students who gain a place on our programmes. This is done for legitimate interests for lifelong alumni relations. If students choose to stay on our alumni network, we retain their contact information for these purposes as outlined in our alumni privacy policy.

Unsuccessful applicants – if a student does not gain a place on our programmes we delete all identifiable information after collection of the student's impact data and retain an anonymised version of the student's eligibility for the programme and educational outcomes until we no longer have a legal basis to do so. The Sutton Trust may also keep students' personal information, without processing it, as required to comply with applicable laws, for our legitimate charitable purposes and to establish, exercise or defend our legal rights.
