Call-Off Schedule 20 (Call-Off Specification)

This Schedule sets out the characteristics of the Deliverables that the Supplier will be required to make to the Buyers under this Call-Off Contract

Introduction

The UK government is committed to achieving its legally binding target of net zero green-house emissions by 2050. Heating our homes, buildings and industry is responsible for a third of the UK's greenhouse gas emissions and represents a major challenge to reaching net zero by 2050. This is why we are taking action to decarbonise heating.

The Heat and Building Strategy published in 2021 set out the foundations for the govern-ment's pathway to net zero buildings in 2050, bringing together work on energy efficiency and clean heat. As part of this, the government set out its commitment to increasing the pro-duction of biomethane for injection into the gas grid as a practical, established, and cost- effective way to reduce carbon emissions and increase energy security.

The newly published Biomass Strategy reviews how sustainable biomass could be best used across the economy to help achieve our net zero greenhouse gas emissions target by 2050. It sets out around 30-40 TWh of biomethane production in 2050 would help the UK achieve net zero cost-effectively.

Biomethane can be produced via anaerobic digestion (AD), a process whereby organic materials are broken down by bacteria in the absence of oxygen to produce biogas, which is then upgraded to make biomethane. Biomethane is chemically identical to natural gas and can be injected into the gas grid as a direct replacement for natural gas.

Current government support for biomethane production is through the Green Gas Support Scheme (GGSS), which opened in November 2021 and is currently due to close in November 2025. The scheme provides tariff payments to new AD plants during a 15-year period for biomethane injected into the national gas grid. The GGSS is funded by the Green Gas Levy (GGL), a levy on fossil fuel gas suppliers.

The Department for Energy Security and Net Zero is now considering a market-based policy framework of support for biomethane which will follow the GGSS after its closure. To inform this, we are taking a holistic approach to identify the barriers to the growth of the biomethane market and understand how best to address these. As part of this work, we are seeking specialist support to help us further explore key areas such as:

- How best to support the growth of the biomethane market. A range of soft levers and regulations will be considered to achieve this, including assessing whether a marketbased mechanism is required and what form this could take.
- The technical potential for biomethane and its end uses to ensure that it is best utilised across the economy.
- Long-term challenges affecting the availability and use of waste and non-waste feedstocks for AD, and how future policy could mitigate these.
- Commercial viability of biomethane production, and the potential for plants to generate additional revenue, including from CO2 capture and digestate valorisation.
- How support for biomethane aligns with domestic renewables policy or takes account of other international support schemes for biomethane.

Aims & Objectives

We are seeking specialist support to assist the Department with the development of a framework of support for biomethane which will follow the Green Gas Support Scheme (GGSS) after its closure.

We are seeking to answer the following questions, amongst others:

- How do we appropriately grow and encourage investment in the UK biomethane market in line with wider net zero and Government objectives with a key focus on ensuring this is done sustainably?
- Have we identified the correct core design principles and how do we design a policy framework that best meets these principles?
- How do we ensure that a range of technologies, beyond AD, that produce biomethane are appropriately supported?
- How do we drive down costs and shift the biomethane industry onto a commercial footing?
- What mechanisms can we use to appropriately deliver our ambition across government, including a potential range of regulations and soft levers?
- How do we promote innovation and best practice sharing in the biomethane industry?
- How do we make the best of other revenue streams (e.g. CCUS and digestate valorisation) to maximise potential across the biomethane industry?

This work will include analysis of existing information and research to inform policy proposals as well as testing of policy proposals. It may also include developing an upcoming call for evidence and consultation, stakeholder engagement, the scoping of future legislation and developing detailed policy blueprint design. In addition, there maybe other ad-hoc tasks to resolve issues that emerge during the policy development.

Background to the Requirement

The Department for Energy Security and Net Zero is focused on the energy portfolio from the former Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS). Our responsibilities are:

- delivering security of energy supply
- ensuring properly functioning energy markets
- encouraging greater energy efficiency
- seizing the opportunities of net zero to lead the world in new green industries

As part of its commitment to the decarbonisation of heat, the Department is responsible for the policy design and legislation of the GGSS. This area of work sits within Clean Heat Directorate, which is focused on tackling the challenge of decarbonising heating in homes and business across the country to support government in meeting its net zero 2050 target.

Scope

Call-Off Schedule 20 (Call-Off Specification) Call-Off Ref: PS23269

Crown Copyright 2018

We are seeking external support from a supplier that has relevant expertise in the UK and other gas supplier markets, particularly in terms of green gas and biomethane as well as expertise in financial models and economics.

Developing a Future Framework for support:

Our future framework will need to address the following points:

- The strategic role of biomethane in reaching net zero. There is an inherent uncertainty in the path towards net zero. Biomethane is adaptable and has a role in each path. However, there is a challenge in designing a policy framework that manages uncertainty in end uses.
- The business model for biomethane:
  - A range of soft levers and regulations will be considered to develop a marketbased framework to support the increase of biomethane production in the UK,
  - Commercial viability of biomethane production, and the potential for plants to generate additional revenue, including from CO2 capture and digestate valorisation.
- The need to build a financial model to support the business model for biomethane.
- The technical potential for biomethane and its end-uses to ensure that it is best utilised across the economy.
- Sustainability criteria for the production of biomethane to ensure environmental factors are properly managed and there are no unintended consequences.
- Streamlining the planning and permitting for new biomethane plants.

The principles:

The future framework should follow a clear set of principles. The following could be used as a guide:

- Sustainability: contribute maximum carbon savings by ensuring biomethane production (and its by-products) are sustainably produced, mitigate its undesirable impacts and play a key role in the circular economy by optimising the use of the appropriate feedstocks.
- Security: ensure that biomethane production meaningfully contributes to Great Britain's energy mix in a reliable and affordable way, using domestic resources, thereby bolstering GB's energy independence. Doing so will help to contribute to the stability and predictability of energy bills, whilst making them less vulnerable to external economic shocks.
- Adaptability: ensure that biomethane considers and utilises the range of productions methods and its adaptability across a range of end-uses, particularly in hard-to-abate industries where there are few other options available and where there is a need to manage feedstocks, such as waste.
- Commercial viability: ensure that the biomethane production market is a stable and competitive one and is a positive contributor the economic activity through effective scheme design. It should incentivise a thriving industry with minimal impact on bills. It should ensure proper accounting for carbon savings resulting from its production and use.
- Compatibility: ensure it is consistent with and complements other Government policies that are relevant to the successful delivery of carbon savings, avoiding or eradicating any policy conflict or contradictions.
