Schedule 1 - Services

1 Overview of Defra Group & Future Farming & Countryside Programme

1.1 Defra Overview

Defra is the UK government department responsible for safeguarding our natural environment, supporting our world-leading food and farming industry, and sustaining a thriving rural economy.

1.2 FFCP Overview

As a member nation of the European Union, the British agriculture industry has been governed by the EU's Common Agriculture Policy (CAP) for the past 40+ years. As the UK prepares to exit the EU, Defra have a unique chance to set our own direction of travel for agriculture. The Future Farming and Countryside programme (FFCP) was set up to manage all aspects of this.

1.3 DDTS Overview including role within FFCP

The Digital, Data & Technology Services division of Defra is building new digital services to support the Future Farming and Countryside Programme. This work includes work focussing on data to ensure that our data fully our internal and external users.

2 Requirements

2.1 Requirement for Data Analysis

As regulations and financial support for farming changes, there will be impacts on the data that supports our digital services. We expect there to be a decline in updates of some of our major datasets.

Defra need to understand how this data will be affected and what the impacts will be on our regulatory work, which requires a comprehensive dataset about land on which farming activities are carried out. These changes are likely to occur in customer records (structured data), geospatial data on land extents, and in records of land usage.

Internal Defra teams will gather existing data for analysis. Defra datasets will be supplied to support this work, anonymised where necessary.

Defra require external consultancy support to help meet the following objectives:

1. Analysing the selected data and interpreting the results,
2. Identifying rates of change,
3. Profiling data to identify any commonalities in data that is subject to frequent change,

The Key aspects for investigation are:

- Project the state of the data over a 1, 3, 5 and 10 year period from the point of change, quantifying data changes over time in customer records, land parcel (extent and ownership/tenancy) and land use data.

- Consider whether the decline in data is likely to be typical compared to the past rates of change in the data, or whether this change will accelerate/decrease data degradation.
- Identify whether there are common factors in data that changes frequently, and whether there is any correlation between rate of change in records and non-compliance.
- Examine the way that Defra agencies currently use data for their business activities, and what the impact of any poor data has been.
- Explore potential alternative sources of data that might augment the primary data as a source for the 1-10 year period and the extent to which these might mitigate the data degradation risks.
- Quantify data risks during any transition to future alternative sources of data, suitable for the 10+ year time period.

2.2 Deliverables

The main output will be a detailed report covering the findings of the investigations set out in 2.1.

If the predicted impacts prove to be large in scale, the report should include identification of options for alternative sources of data that might support or replace the existing data over time.

2.3 Timescales

The target is for the supplier to complete the investigation of this issue and issue the report within a defined time window (approximately 8 weeks).

The scope of investigation may be flexed to fit this timescale if necessary, with more complex investigations deferred to later phases, or additional areas of investigation added if time allows.
