This is guaranteed to equal or better the charge you would have direct from the cloud vendor. The resources covered by the subscription are mutually agreed within a Subscription Letter. Blue Credits Blue Credits are bought in multiples of [REDACTED], and are expressed and valued in [REDACTED] Where the pricing by suppliers is denominated in a different currency, Strategic Blue and APHA will translate the expression of value of Blue Credits to another currency at an agreed FX rate. Shared Contingency Buffer

That amount expressed in GB£ and/or another currency (for example, US$) of Strategic Blue Cloud Credits not specifically assigned as budget to a project, the purpose of non-assignment being to have Blue Credits available in the event of an immediate need to cover unexpected spend and/or to cover a period of delay in the approval of a new purchase order.

Agreed Distribution Methodology

Blue Credits are allocated to budgets based on forecast usage taking into consideration Shared Contingency Buffer requirements.

Active Spend Management

Strategic Blue receives accurate usage data from suppliers at the end of each calendar month and updates a shared reporting system with this data. In the event of a requirement to detect or understand a change in usage patterns, or to meet a specific other reporting request, Strategic Blue is able to obtain estimated usage data and update the shared reporting system mid-month.

Tail Risk

The risk that the remaining budget plus shared contingency buffer will not cover usage that cannot be reasonably predicted based on past or forecast usage, for example that may be the result of a surge in demand.

Clauses:

1. The Supplier will help the Buyer to set up separate accounts for each project.
2. The supplier will use reasonable commercial endeavours to ensure that the buyer sees the most up to date usage reports as quickly as possible for all accounts.
3. The Supplier will cooperate fully with the Buyers IT security team. The Buyers (Defra/APHA's) IT security team will be able to vet the Suppliers security arrangements and may or may not provide approval. If approval is not given the Supplier will use reasonable commercial endeavours to incorporate any small changes requested to accommodate Buyers (Defra/APHA's) IT security requirements and facilitate sign off.
4. Should the Buyer want to use a supplier of services which are outside the Supplier's current portfolio the Supplier will use reasonable commercial endeavours to onboard the provider for a reasonable fee.
5. Excess 'Blue Credits' currently allocated to the Shared Contingency Buffer can be spent on other project accounts or refunded under an Agreed Distribution Methodology, should the Active Spend Management scheme come to an end, or otherwise need to reduce in scale. Both parties agree to act reasonably in this process accepting that draw down from the Shared Contingency Buffer should only take place where this is a genuine reduction in scale/activity and only then phased over a period of time so as to mitigate both parties financial exposure. Unless otherwise agreed, the Agreed Distribution Methodology shall be that all usage is turned off as soon as possible following notification, such that no further costs are incurred by either party. Following this the Supplier will undertake deconsolidation of any AWS Accounts where applicable after which time Supplier will refund any remaining Blue Credits within 30 days. Participating projects contribute a Shared Contingency Buffer for their spend, jointly covering against the risk of an inadvertent overspend.
6. "Tail-risk" of overspend beyond Shared Contingency Buffer is covered by the supplier.
7. The Shared Contingency Buffer will apply across all accounts where the Supplier is inserted in the billing chain. For the avoidance of doubt any accounts that the Buyer

	(APHA) pay directly are out of scope. 8. The mechanism for operating the Shared Contingency Buffer shall continue to operate as established unless otherwise agreed. As different accounts and projects carry different risks, each project will need to contribute to a different amount to the Shared Contingency Buffer commensurate with its associated risk. The Buyer and Supplier will agree the contribution each project will make at account set up or account type change and the amount of Blue Credits required to implement that. 9. The Supplier will use best endeavours to keep and accurately maintain a transparent system of accounts whereby the Parties can see the availability status of any purchased Blue Credits, on a reasonably timed basis.
