The system provided is classified as a product for general laboratory use and not as an IVD device within the meaning of EU directive 98/79/EC ("In vitro diagnostics"). The system components are in conformity with:

- ☐ EU directives 2014/30/EC ("EMC")

The method programming supplied by Hamilton is to allow refinement of methods used in your laboratory and conversion into an automated format, suitable to your specific requirements on the Hamilton instrument of your choice. This comprises basic assay and liquid handling set-ups and plate transport for the assays described. The on-site training will allow you to modify these methods if required and develop new ones. It is assumed the chemical basics have been previously optimized in your laboratory.

Adequate performance of the above setup would be considered as 'final acceptance', defined in a site acceptance document.

Following Factory Acceptance Tests (FAT's) if applicable, the system will be installed by our trained Applications Specialists, who will assist you in programming methods. In addition they will provide training to allow you to write your own protocols in the future. Once you are satisfied that your protocols are running to an agreed standard, you will be supported by our team of Service Engineers, who will contact you in due course to arrange planned maintenance visits, if agreed on, during the warranty period, and be available to support you in the unlikely event of a system breakdown. Furthermore our Application Specialists will continue to provide you with high-level support for developing new protocols or adapting existing ones.

Your relationship with Hamilton will of course continue beyond this point and we look forward to working with you. We trust that this quotation meets with your satisfaction. Please do not hesitate to contact us should you have any queries.

Yours sincerely,
