Schedule 1 - Services

FSA Content Designer Requirements:

By September 2020, food.gov needs to be compliant with the Public Sector Bodies Accessibility Regulations. The regulations state that all public sector websites must meet the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG 2.1) level 'AA' and publish an accessibility statement by 23 September 2020. The regulations build on existing obligations to people who have a disability under the Equality Act 2010.

A recent audit of food.gov.uk uncovered a significant number of non-compliance issues. The issues identified primarily cover content structure, audio/video and formatting (in particular, use of PDFs/Excel/Word).

To add context to the scale of the project, we have identified:

- over 500 files (PDFs/Excel/Word) dated post Sept 2018 that need reviewing (metrics and original objectives) and to be made accessible
- 250 pages that have accessibility issues and need fixing

All the above needs to be completed, along with a published accessibility statement, by 23 September 2020. However, our goal is to be prepared before the deadline. We are aiming for the completion of the page issues by 31st March 2020, and files by 30th June. The service will focus most of their efforts on the files/PDF element of this work, taking a heavy burden off the FSA's small content team. The level of compliance will also need to be maintained onwards of September 2020. We want to demonstrate that we are committed to inclusivity and are leaders in disability inclusion across government. The service will also support us in embedding practices than ensure ongoing compliance across the organisation; there are currently 70 FSA content owners.

This background is not exhaustive, there may be a need to flex and change for business needs.

Skill level requirements:

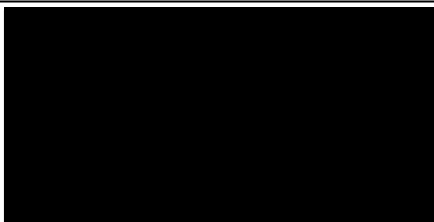

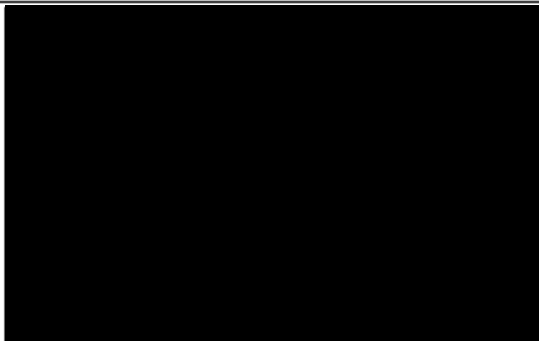

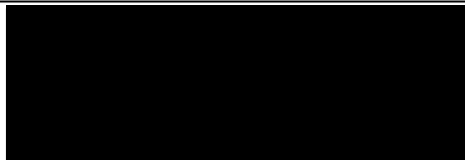

- experience of preparing accessible digital content in a range of formats including PDFs in Adobe Acrobat
- experience in content design, editorial and writing for the web in plain English for GOV.UK or similar
- an understanding of web accessibility guidelines and standards, particularly the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) version 2.1
- excellent organisational skills, with the ability to plan and manage updates to large volumes of content
- the ability to evaluate and test the accessibility of online publications (eg using Adobe Acrobat and screen reader software) and work out solutions for improving them

Service requirements:

- Scroll to provide CVs of individuals to carry out the service
- interview face-to-face or by phone
- ideally London based, but would consider remote working early GDS days and contributed to transactions and services that have increased access to public services.

Any Scroll team member working on a technology project or programme is familiar with the Digital Service Standard. We also offer training in content design and content strategy.

Experience: Our content designers played a significant role in creating the content for GOV.UK. They've also worked in multidisciplinary teams to develop services that meet the Digital Service Standard. They are experts in public sector content design, transition to cloud services and agile working.

Expertise: [REDACTED] one of the leading content strategists globally and an expert in intelligent content, is on the executive team. As Chief Knowledge Officer, she organises Scroll conferences, training and meetups, and writes and commissions blogs and white papers. This helps Scroll to position itself as a thought leader in content matters and gives our staff and clients first-hand access to the latest developments in content strategy. It also enables Scroll to attract the best content experts in the field and to nurture and retain our existing Scroll people.

Quality: Many of the Scroll content designers have been with us for over 5 years, and we constantly expand our pool of content experts through training, recruiting and assessing. We screen all new Scroll team members via interview, online tests and security vetting. We put quality first in the services we provide to clients by taking particular care in matching members of the Scroll team to projects (in terms of experience, aptitude and cultural fit) and by offering them support and skills development outside their client work. Every process in the Scroll admin team is evaluated for quality as well as efficiency, as our purpose is to apply quality to every aspect of our work.

Value: We work flexibly and can offer short bursts of support at different levels for different stages of a project. For example, we can provide a Scroll consultant with experience of content design for services to support a discovery alongside other members of a multidisciplinary team, and then provide content designers for the alpha and beta. This model allows clients to scale up or down quickly and efficiently, fitting in with the principles of agile working.

Knowledge transfer: The success of a digital project often hangs on the content. During and after a digital transition such as a migration or a platform launch, we help you put processes in place to maintain content to ensure that what users see stays up to date, useful, accurate and consistent over the long term.

That's why we like to continue to collaborate with our clients after the initial drive towards project launch. Rather than delivering work and concluding our relationship with you at that point, we like to integrate knowledge transfer throughout the project, not just in the handover of assets at the end. We do this through informal training, crits, pair writing, flexible mentoring support and content 'surgery' services. We produce manuals that help to cement new learning and share it with new joiners in your teams.

Scroll has played a vital role in helping Defra and its agencies to reduce the volume of their external guidance on GOV.UK by over 80%, making it quicker for users to access and easier for them to understand how to comply with the law. – Defra

Scroll's relevant experience

All our contractors are experienced in using plain English, and many of them have trained other organisations in how to write this way. It's mandatory for all audiences when writing for GOV.UK. As a major provider of writers and editors for GOV.UK, we are therefore accustomed to taking complex source material from specialists and turning it into clear, succinct content suitable for the intended audience.

Our work has included writing, editing and proofreading content intended for:

- government departments, policy makers and officials
- specialist professions – including Bupa, Public Health England, Ofgem
- the general public: many of our contractors and members of our central team were part of the award-winning content design team that launched the GOV.UK website, writing plain English content for a general audience

GOV.UK content aimed at the general public is designed to require a reading age of 9. It is read by people with learning disabilities, young people, and people currently experiencing stressful life events (such as carers or people who have recently been bereaved). We are therefore well practised at editing content for all kinds of audiences.

Defra Smarter Guidance

We worked on the Smarter Guidance project for the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra). This was an extensive, complex project that radically streamlined and improved Defra's guidance, reducing the volume of content by 80%.

There were 120,000 pages of content to review, archive or rewrite. Our team of content designers focused on user needs, checking the language used by the people who needed the guidance and making sure the content reflected this in plain English.

Here's some guidance on bluetongue disease that we rewrote and an analysis of the improvements we made.
