its obligations under the Contract, and that the Contract is executed by its duly authorised representative.

Schedule 2 - Specification

- 1 The Suppliers shall provide the Services in accordance with this Schedule.

Introduction

UKRI is the UK's largest public funder of research and innovation. We reach across disciplines and across sectors and recognise the unique role we can and should play in leading and driving systemic and structural change, along with the importance of collaborating with others in doing so. Through our investments, systems and incentives we have a responsibility to catalyse and influence change, using our leadership role in the UK and globally through our partnerships.

UKRI's draft EDI strategy sets out our ambition for an inclusive research and innovation system, and our long-term commitment to achieving this. Reshaping research and innovation so that it values and supports different people, places and projects is a significant challenge and requires coordinated and long-term focus across the sector. UKRI's first edition of the EDI Strategy is expected later in 2022.

Diversity improves research and innovation outcomes. This means we need to attract the widest group of people -with different expertise, experiences, approaches, and ways of thinking- to join, remain and thrive in the research and innovation system. To this end, Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC), part of UK Research and Innovation (UKRI), is currently developing a 3-year EDI action plan which builds on knowledge, research, data, and expertise from across the research and innovation sector. Our thinking has been informed by conversations held with people from across our community, advocacy groups, learned societies, expert organisations and special interest groups. Our action plan will be published later in 2022.

A significant focus of our action plan is to investigate the barriers to greater access and participation and to provide improved support for people in our engineering, physical and mathematical sciences research community. Our activities include an investigation on how we might better support neurodiverse researchers and ensure our practices are inclusive. We aim to implement the recommendations across our working practices and share the findings with our community. EPSRC aims to move towards becoming a more equitable and inclusive organisation.

The project

The Mathematical Sciences theme, on behalf of EPSRC, wish to undertake a neuro-inclusion audit of our processes and approaches to engagement and communication methods with our stakeholders to consider how we can provide a more supportive and inclusive environment for neurodivergent applicants and partners and to ultimately, improve our own practices and share learning across EPSRC and UKRI.

The aim of this tender process is to identify an independent 3rd party to conduct the audit. This document provides a scope with detail of the desired objectives, outcomes, timeline and suggested approaches that the contractor may undertake.

Objectives

- The Mathematical Science theme will work with a 3rd party contractor to undertake an independent and unbiased examination of the inclusivity of the various ways we engage with the community external to EPSRC, with particular consideration of how we might better engage with neurodivergent members of our community. This includes members of the academic community but could also include other stakeholders. See below for scope of what is meant by "engagement".

- There will be a number of opportunities for the 3rd party contractor to be involved in a range of engagements with the community which are currently planned from January to March 2023. It is hoped that these activities with the community will help give the 3rd party contractor a broad understanding of how the Mathematical Science team communicates and interacts with them, along with the procedures it has in place for engagement. These engagements may take place in person, hybrid or online so it will be anticipated that there will be ample opportunities to participate through these different means.

Outputs

- Following the audit to assess the community engagement activities and procedures, the contractor should produce a tailored report which details the methods, findings and recommendations of the audit. This report is to include:
  - detailed recommendations on suggested improvements on how to make our engagements more inclusive. As well as identify where we do things well and suggested new routes/mechanisms to engagement.
  - Information on any key issues and areas of concern.
- A qualitative or quantitative benchmark assessment of successfulness of improvements made to engagement (for example a survey before and after engagements to show as evidence of effectiveness).
- Provide training materials and plan to support the organisations knowledge of neurodiversity and inclusive engagement. In particular, where we need to improve and how we can improve. The training will be rolled out across EPSRC (and shared across UKRI where appropriate) to enable the organisation to deliver a range of recommendations on how to engage differently for better inclusion and impact.

This is not an exhaustive list and we are keen to work closely with the 3rd party contractor to ensure that we have a comprehensive understanding on how to make our procedures, communication and engagement with the community as inclusive as possible, with the expectation that we will share our findings across EPSRC.

Outcomes - What impact will the activity have?

- Increased knowledge of best practice for engaging with people who are neurodivergent across a range of approaches.
- More inclusive and improved practices across EPSRC - Our engagements are more inclusive and accessible to those with neurodiverse traits but, as a spill-over effect, more accessible in general, resulting in reduction of barriers when engaging and, indirectly, when applying for funding.
- Increased knowledge of the topic within Mathematical Sciences / EPSRC as well as a general awareness on inclusive engagement
- Be able to translate our knowledge across EPSRC/ UKRI as necessary
- Increased confidence when discussing the topic or when engaging with those with (or we think might have) neurodiverse traits. Increased team "fluency" in discussing neurodiversity.
- Our investigations have improved our understanding of neurodiversity related issues and enabled us to address challenges and remove barriers.
- EPSRC provides better support, improved access, and an increase in participation. This has led to a more representative and diverse portfolio and community engagement.

- Support for people who are neurodivergent is improved, barriers have been removed leading to greater access and participation.
- We have enabled a culture in our community where different perspectives, skills, and experiences are valued alongside working environments where people feel safe and heard – where everyone can participate
- Contributing to fulfilments of our commitments in our UKRI EDI strategy and EPSRC action plan.

Potential Research Questions:

We expect the successful bidder to work closely with EPSRC to develop research questions, however we have identified a number of potential questions that could be used.

- What are the challenges that neurodivergent people encounter - generally (for context) and when engaging organisations like EPSRC? Likewise, what challenges does EPSRC encounter on our movement towards more inclusive engagement?
- What is the prevalence of neurodiversity within mathematical science research community and EPSRC since data disclosure is poor and analysis is limited. This is to provide context and increase our knowledge of the community as a whole. EPSRC is open to suggestions on how this could be measured but may include a self-declaration from those in the community and subsequent analysis.
- What are all the different ways that EPSRC/ Mathematical Sciences theme engage with external stakeholders? What is best practice when it comes to inclusive engagement with those with neurodiverse traits for each of these methods of engagement?
- What examples of approaches to inclusive and accessible communication work well for other organisations and why? What can we learn?
- What framework/toolkits are there that can be used to identify the best approach for a given engagement type and method/ tools (e.g. PowerPoint slides, reports etc.) and to check that it is inclusive and accessible.
- What are the benefits for the mathematical sciences community and for EPSRC for greater inclusivity of neurodivergent individuals?
- How can our selection processes about who we engage with be open and transparent as possible? Especially as sometimes we rely on universities and other organisations to put people forward for opportunities.

Aspects for the successful bidder to consider in their approach:

- How to involve people who have neurodiverse traits or additional requirements from the academic community within the audit – e.g. a call for participants
- Identify all the different ways we engage the community. Use evidence and expert opinion to provide how best to make sure that each of those approaches are inclusive. Offer guidance on how to identify the best approach for given case examples.
- We ask for recognition that EPSRC has multiple approaches to engagement, and we must balance the needs of inclusivity with the function of the engagement.
- It is essential that the bidders would be able to bring with them expertise and experience of engaging with neurodiverse individuals within the workplace. In addition, it would be desirable for lived experience of being a neurominority or supporting neurominority relatives/colleagues/friends.

What can be provided to the successful bidder? What are the inputs to the audit?

- Information on how we engage with our stakeholders

- Opportunity to shadow our engagements through several routes. For example, provide first-hand experience of our strategic advisory routes, workshops, university visits as well as examples of where we engage on a 1:1 basis.
- Put successful bidders in touch with academics who have self-identified as being neurodivergent.
- General suppressed diversity data (but only to the level of Disability - not subgroups of disability due to small numbers and the need to ensure confidentiality).

Other information

- We recognise that external communications around neurodiversity are important and sensitive – we do not want to reinforce stereotypes about the Mathematical Sciences and neurodiversity so this needs to be considered carefully. When explaining our approach to Neurodiversity through this audit, it should be very prominent that this is being done on behalf of EPSRC. Any issues should be raised promptly with EPSRC.

What do we mean by engagement?

- When issuing communications about funding calls, policies, strategies, impact case studies and processes:
  - Funding Opportunity Call documents
  - Webpages
  - Social media posts
  - News letters
  - Press releases
  - Webinars
- When soliciting participation and information:
  - Workshops
  - Theme visits
  - Sandpits
  - Town Halls
  - Surveys
  - Focus Groups
- When finding out about the landscape:
  - 1:1 discussions between portfolio managers and those in the portfolios - Calls, in person visits, email.
- Engagement as part of the peer review process:
  - Interviews
  - Big pitch type engagements
  - Notifications via Siebel system
  - Panels
- Appointment to our governance roles:
  - Application forms
  - Notifications of success or not.
- Monitoring of active grants:
  - Attending advisory board meetings
  - Quarterly reports

As well as the function and approaches provided above, we are also keen to find out more about accessible tools, methods and appearance of materials (number of words on a page/slide, use of colour and diagrams etc.) of our written and verbal communication. The scope of engagement could also include digital tools for accessibility (such as the checker software for screen readers)

In addition, the project could also include how we engage – e.g. providing slides and materials ahead of time, allowing for people to continue engagement outside of meetings and providing time for reflection.

What is not in scope

- Assessment of the inclusivity of the peer review process for neurodiverse individuals, however, were findings to support recommendations in the process (especially where communication, engagement, and processes interface), we are open to receiving them.
- Areas of the academic research system that EPSRC does not control such as engagement, policies, and practices of 3rd party organisations such as Universities.
- Internal communication
