the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998 (Department of Health 1999).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

One of the key challenges facing the public sector is the need to improve the efficiency of the services that are provided. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

A third key challenge facing the public sector is the need to ensure that the services that are provided are accessible to all members of the public. This is a challenge that is being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

Finally, a fourth key challenge facing the public sector is the need to ensure that the services that are provided are sustainable. This is a challenge that is being met by a number of initiatives, including the introduction of competition, the restructuring of public sector organisations, and the introduction of performance measures. The aim of these initiatives is to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the services that are required by the public, in a cost-effective and efficient manner.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the principle of 'active ageing', which is the process of enabling older people to live full, active lives. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently in their own homes.
- Older people should be able to participate in social and community activities.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the mental health needs of the young. The Mental Health Foundation (1999) has identified the need for a 'new paradigm' in the way we think about mental health problems in the young. The new paradigm should also be based on the following principles: (12) mental health problems are not just a result of individual factors, but a result of a combination of individual, social and cultural factors; (13) mental health problems are not just a result of biological factors, but a result of a combination of biological, social and cultural factors; (14) mental health problems are not just a result of individual factors, but a result of a combination of individual, social and cultural factors; (15) mental health problems are not just a result of biological factors, but a result of a combination of biological, social and cultural factors.

The new paradigm should also be based on the following principles: (16) mental health problems are not just a result of individual factors, but a result of a combination of individual, social and cultural factors; (17) mental health problems are not just a result of biological factors, but a result of a combination of biological, social and cultural factors; (18) mental health problems are not just a result of individual factors, but a result of a combination of individual, social and cultural factors; (19) mental health problems are not just a result of biological factors, but a result of a combination of biological, social and cultural factors.

Subject matter of the processing	Trintech provide a platform, Cadency, which is a cloud-based financial reporting and reconciliation system. UK SBS and UKRI will have individual user accounts to access this functionality, with appropriate permissions for functions required by each organisation. Financial information will be processed to provide financial reconciliations monthly. Cadency provides a locked audit trail, with records unable to be amended after electronic sign-off, providing secure accountability within a contained system.

Duration of the processing	Contract duration is 12 months. The type of user account determines the permissions e.g., UKRI workers have access for viewing reports and quality control only whereas UK SBS workers will have access to input raw data and process financial information. UKRI will be able to see data held in Cadency but not access or manipulate the underlying raw data. The number of UKRI workers with this reporting functionality is limited and based on their role within UKRI e.g., auditors, heads of finance etc. and is determined by UK SBS. New accounts are set up by UK SBS only. Other workers' personal data may be collected and processed by Trintech/Cadency such as procurement or administrative personnel who do not have an account but will provide contact details for administration of the contract or provision of accounts/access to the platform to UK SBS and UKRI. Personal data may be processed by Trintech/Cadency in order to provide support or maintenance. Trintech/Cadency will not collect or process any other personal data than that specified above.
