Schedule 4 - Statement of Requirements

• Background. The First Sea Lord Sea Power Conference is an annual and key opportunity for the Royal Navy to have a conversation with leading academics and policymakers about the geopolitical, technological, and strategic main trends and what they mean for the Royal Navy. As the Royal Navy main influential event of the year it also aims to attract and engage with a distinctive domestic and international audience, and to improve the Royal Navy strategic thinking. Promote the Defence and Royal Navy narrative and messaging is a secondary purpose of the event.

This 2023 edition will allow the First Sea Lord (and Royal Navy senior officers) to articulate his vision for the Royal Navy one year on from the war in Ukraine, and two years on from the Integrated Review 2021.

• Requirement. Plan, host and execute the Sea Power Conference according to First Sea Lord intent.

• Description of Work. Shape, host, run and report the full day hybrid First Sea Lord Sea Power Conference for 200 in-person attendees and 2000 people remotely

The conference will include:

- 4 to 5 panel sessions (limited duration of each panel up to 1h15min);
- A supported in-person Future Maritime Strategists event in a dedicated room next to the conference place and during the conference day (up to 1h30min duration, and up to 30 people);
- A working dinner in which will attend the core group of speakers and designated VIPs (up to 32 invites, including a minimum of 12 First Sea lord invites - dinner at no cost to the Royal Navy and paid through sponsorship);
- Adequate catering for the full day conference for all people attending in-person (at no cost to the Royal Navy and paid through sponsorship).

• Deliverables:

- Outline program. The contractor will submit an outline program to the Naval Staff (Directorate of Strategy & policy) at least 3 months ahead of the event, to reach an agreement with First Sea Lord. This outline program needs to be reviewed and validated before acceptance of the contract.
- Speakers' identification and invitation. Once the program is agreed, the contractor will suggest a list of suitable speakers and will invite them to participate, covering all the associated costs (travel, subsistence and accommodation). Some key Defence, Governmental and Royal Navy senior leaders will be chosen as speakers by the Royal Navy itself.
- Marketing of the event. The contractor will market the event through its website and social media in liaison with Royal Navy Comms.
- Invitations. Based on a list provided by the Naval Staff, the contractor will manage invitation and registration processes until the conference day. At least 150 in-person free invites must be reserved through the Royal Navy invitation list (remote invitation should be free to all Royal Navy list).
- Reading pack (editorial, design and graphics). The contractor will provide the invitees with a food-for-thought/research essay as part of a digitised and edited delegate pack for the event, at least 2 weeks before the event.

- Estate. The contractor will provide suitable venue and rooms to host the event (dinner, conference, post-event reception, Future Maritime Strategists breakout room, a few other rooms to host VIPs) in accordance with the prestige of the Royal Navy, including the associated audio/video, IT, Communications support, infrastructure and people.
- Master of ceremony (conference and event management). The contractor will deliver a recorded conference. The conference will be web-casted to the invitees on the Internet and on defence Connect Royal Navy application, in a way enabling all remote and in-person attendees to interact during Question & Answers sessions. A recording of the conference sessions will be provided on the internet and on Defence Connect within 24 hours of the event's conclusion.
- Catering. Run the conference dinner (32 speakers and VIP guests), the lunch and refreshments (200 in-person invites)
- Post-conference readout and recording. The contractor will provide a conclusions paper no later than 40 days after the convening of the event.
- Contract Start Date and Duration. The contract will start two months ahead of the event date and will end two months after the event, on completion of the post-conference readout. Date of the event to be fixed in accordance with Royal Navy and contractor availabilities in 2023 first semester.
- Security Considerations. The contractor will ensure the security of the event in liaison with Metropolitan Police and the VIPs' security personnel if required. The content of the conference will not be classified.
- Other Considerations. The contractor is expected to enjoy a high reputation in the Defence Think Tank or Academic community. The contractor is allowed to seek additional and limited funding from corporate sponsors, provided that they are not vetoed by the Naval Staff, and do not influence the themes of the conference.

• Government Furnished Equipment/Information (GFE/GFI).

As part of the contract, the Naval Staff will provide agreement of the programme, agreement of the speakers' list, and invitees' list. The Naval Staff will also take care of inviting the Defence and Governmental officials identified as desired speakers.

• Virtual only conference. Should the conference require to be virtual only, some costs, primarily catering (at no cost to the Royal Navy and paid through sponsorship) are likely to be reduced significantly, the amount would depend on the timing of a decision to opt for a virtual only conference. The venue costs however would remain as the conference would still be broadcast.

• Contractor's independence of action

In no way shall any part of this agreement prejudice the intellectual and academic freedom of the contractor. The Royal Navy agrees that in relation to the activity described in this agreement, the contractor has sole authority over: the researchers employed, the methodology applied, and the conclusions reached in any research. The identification of topics to be discussed, the agenda for the event, the chairing of event discussions, the speakers invited to contribute, and the delegates invited to participate should be a common agreement between the Royal Navy and the contractor.
