SCHEDULE 1 - SPECIFICATION OF SERVICES

1.0 Background to Natural England

1.1 Natural England (NE) is the government's adviser on the natural environment. We provide practical advice, grounded in science, on how best to safeguard England's natural wealth for the benefit of everyone.

1.2 The New Forest is an exceptionally important site for nature conservation. It is one of the largest areas of semi-natural vegetation in the UK and supports a wealth of wildlife, including a large number of very scarce plants, animals, invertebrates, birds and fungi. The New Forest (NF) is the third largest terrestrial Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI) in England and its international importance is recognised through the additional designations of Special Area for Conservation (SAC), Special Protection Area (SPA) and Ramsar wetland. These afford the New Forest the highest level of statutory protection from damaging activities and development.

2.0 Background to the specific Natural England work area relevant to this purchase

2.1 This contract is required to help NE understand whether there are any impacts from recreation on ground nesting birds (GNB). A research recommendation paper previously prepared for the New Forest National Park Authority (unpublished) recommended four hierarchical tranches of study work, of which this forms the first.

2.2 Currently there is little New Forest specific research into whether GNB are being affected by disturbance as has been conducted for other lowland heathland SPA sites, so this contract should help Natural England begin to understand the densities and distribution of GNB in the New Forest and whether recreational disturbance is a factor affecting them.

2.3 The New Forest is classified as an SPA as it supports significant breeding populations of the following GNB species: Dartford warbler, Nightjar, and Woodlark. Due to the aesthetic appeal of the NF and its location close to major conurbations, it receives approx. 13.5 million visitor days annually, which are made up of a number of activities including dog walking, cycling, wildlife watching, walking and picnicking.

2.4 The Recreation Management Strategy Steering Group (which is made up of statutory bodies with responsibility for recreational management in the NF) are set with the task of improving the recreational experience, whilst avoiding damage to the special qualities of the NF, which includes the GNB. Therefore this study should begin to aid the understanding of how the GNB respond to recreational pressure in the NF and the study should help ascertain to what extent (compared to other factors) recreation is a causal factor for lower breeding densities of Woodlark, Nightjar and Dartford Warbler in the New Forest compared to elsewhere in the UK.

2.5 Densities of GNB are markedly lower in the New Forest compared to other lowland heathland area, but direct comparison is complicated by habitat data for these areas not being strictly comparable, i.e. areas of heathland may be split by wet/dry/humid for some sites but not for others and those habitats are utilised differently by the species involved. In particular, the potential habitat differences between sites could be of particular importance and may be a major factor if, for example, the structure of habitat in the New Forest is quite different to other sites.

2.6 This study should help NE to understand why the differences occur and the factors behind those differences. Potential factors include grazing intensity, habitat structure, trampling of nests, land management techniques, prey availability, forestry management, predator populations, recreation levels and pattern of habitat mosaics.

2.7 As the driver for the study is the potential for recreation to have impacts. Evidence of impacts from disturbance needs to be considered and, although well documented for some bird species in some locations (particularly the Dorset Heaths and Thames Basin heaths), little work has been considered specifically for the GNB of the New Forest.

3.0 Requirement

3.1 This study should offer a comparative desk-based analysis of GNB densities across different heathland SPAs in order to provide answers as to why the GNB densities are lower in the New Forest, exactly how low the densities are compared to other sites and compare variations in the densities across England.

3.2 The comparison should look across different SPAs in lowland England and drill down into different scales i.e. SPA to SPA, different SSSI and patches of available habitat within them. The analysis should also consider factors such as varied recreational pressure, the level of urban development in the vicinity, habitat variables and distribution within the SPA, edge effect, fragmentation of the habitat and level of access, i.e. path network versus road network, management regimes etc.

3.3 The analysis should provide a better understanding of why the densities are lower in the New Forest and give some indication as to the nature of sites which have the higher densities and the factors driving the different densities.

3.4 The study should explore how the bird numbers vary in relation to area of site and at the same time consider the many variables that could influence breeding bird density.

3.5 The key output from the study should be consideration of the variation in bird densities across England, with an explanation of the extent to which the New Forest densities are low after controlling for extent of habitat. The study should employ explanatory variables to highlight those that may explain the different densities and for NE to consider in further studies.

3.6 The results should be provided in such a format that they could be widely interpreted by a range of user groups, without a deep understanding of how the work was conducted.

3.7 The technical report is to be provided electronically as either a Word or PDF document. The report must meet NE's commissioned report guidance.
