1.Introduction

Should give a brief introduction to the organisation, including the business that the organisation is in.

The Office of the Sentencing Council supports the Sentencing Council for England and Wales.

The Sentencing Council for England and Wales was set up in April 2010 to promote greater transparency and consistency in sentencing, while maintaining the independence of the judiciary. The primary role of the Council is to issue guidelines on sentencing, which the courts must follow unless it is in the interests of justice not to do so.

The Sentencing Council is an independent, non-departmental public body which is part of the Ministry of Justice family of arm's-length bodies.

The Council has responsibility for:

- developing sentencing guidelines and monitoring their use
- assessing the impact of guidelines on sentencing practice. The Council may also be required to consider the impact of policy and legislative proposals relating to sentencing, when requested by the Government, and
- promoting awareness among the public regarding the realities of sentencing, and publishing information about sentencing practice in magistrates' courts and the Crown Court.

2.Background to the Requirement

Provide background information to the project to help the contractor understand how it fits in to the business objectives of the procurement. Consider including issues such as:

- any history relevant to the procurement
- recent developments
- a description of the business activities in the area relating to the procurement
- business functions & processes

- organisation & staffing
- roles & responsibilities

The Sentencing Council is commissioning a 'User Testing' project to explore how sentencers access and use the sentencing guidelines and navigate the Sentencing Council Website. This project supports the business priorities in several ways.

The Sentencing Council has a statutory duty under the Coroners and Justice Act 2009 primarily to produce sentencing guidelines. Given the move from paper to digital guidelines in 2018, the Sentencing Council committed to a 'user testing/ useability' project as part of its published response to its consultation "What next for the Sentencing Council?" in November 2021. Specifically, the Council outlined that the project's aim is to "test how sentencers use, access and experience digital sentencing guidelines" to ensure that guidelines can be used in a way that meets their intended aims and can be easily accessed. As set out in this response, it is expected that the project may result in the proposal of potential changes to improve the provision of the sentencing guidelines on the website and ensure they are used in line with the intentions of the Council. As such, this project is also in the Council's published workplan.

This project is of particular importance now as the guidelines moved to being digital and predominately presented on the Sentencing Council website in 2018. Since then, we have not explored or analysed their accessibility through formal user testing, nor have we explored whether the use and ease of the guidelines has changed from moving from paper to digital. Further, this is also the first time in ten years that such a project looking at the use of the guidelines has been undertaken.

3. Requirement

This is a statement of what is to be delivered and forms the main body of the specification. The 'golden rule' is that specifications need to be Clear, Concise and Unambiguous. It also:

- details what will be expected of the contractor under the contract
- how you see the contract operating to ensure aims and objectives are met
- details specific tasks, outputs and expectations
- do not embed critical requirements in background information – contractors may miss them
- list the important elements of the requirements first, and work through to least important

Specify requirements as:

- Mandatory -essential requirements that must be met
- Desirable – requirements that whilst bringing benefits are not essential
- Information – requirements that request supplementary detail that may be helpful to the overall picture

Note: As a general rule, no information should be provided about the proposed budget availability. The intention is to ensure enough detail is provided about the scope of the project to enable the contractor to gauge the size of the task themselves given their detailed and specialist knowledge, without leading on price.

The first part of this project will be an internally run survey of sentencers to get widespread quantitative data. The results of this survey will then feed into the proposed contracted work.

The contracted work should cover observations of sentencers at courts and usability testing of the website both in person and virtually, as well as a series of structured interviews. It is intended that the contracted work will result in an understanding of the use, accessibility and navigability of the guidelines and website, with a series of recommendations for improvements to either the guidelines or website as necessary.

Specifically, it is mandatory for the following requirements to be met:

- Workshops to consider internal survey results, define the intended outcome, scope and learning requirements for the project
- In-person observation of sentencers making sentencing determinations in courts (either in real time or in set up scenarios if not possible in real time) and of
- Virtual observation/usability testing of sentencers using the website to access and navigate guidelines
- Structured interviews with sentencers
- Write up of all results and presentation of all data in report or similar
- Series of key recommendations in slidedeck/report or similar

It is desirable for the following requirements to be met:

- Additional methods of data collecting such as digital heat mapping/tracking
- Further analysis of results from both internal quantitative survey results and user and usability qualitative results

4.Aims

Should provide details of the main aims and reasons of the tender exercise

The main aims of the tender exercise are:

- To test how sentencers use, access and experience the sentencing guidelines
- To understand how sentencers use the sentencing guidelines when making sentencing determinations
- To understand how sentencers navigate and use the Sentencing Council website
- To learn anything further about the experience or accessibility of both the guidelines and the website
- To have key recommendations from this learning to improve any issues or weaknesses found with either the guidelines or the website

No exit strategy is necessary as no further work will be required. If there are any issues, these will be raised with the contractor directly and objectives must be met according to the timeline to ensure payment.

Supplier's bid

Background

This proposal has been prepared by the Behavioural Insights Team (BIT) in response to the Sentencing Council's request for a supplier solution. This 'Supplier Solution' describes how BIT would carry out user research with sentencers on how they use sentencing guidelines, to meet the requirements set out in the specification document.

Our understanding the research requirements

The Sentencing Council is seeking to better understand how sentencers access, use and interact with sentencing guidelines on the Council's website. This is of particular interest to the Council because guidelines are now predominantly in digital format with less and less use of paper guidelines. The Council has not yet carried out research into how sentencers use the online guidelines but did commit to doing so in a consultation response in November 2021. This project will provide the Council with an understanding into how sentencers engage with the guidelines and recommendations to improve this engagement.

We have drafted the following key research questions based on our understanding of the requirements. These will be refined in consultation with the Council at project initiation.

- Access: How do they access and use guidelines in a sentencing situation?
- Ease of use: How do sentencers find using and navigating guidelines on the website?
- Experience: What is the overall experience and level of satisfaction among sentencers with the website?
- Promoting access: What changes can the Council make to promote access and use of the online guidelines?
- Improving user experience: What changes can be made to the website to improve the user experience of sentencers navigating the online guidelines?

Our proposed research approach

In this section we set out our proposed approach to delivering the research. We will refine our approach based on feedback and discussion with the Sentencing Council at project initiation.

Phase 1: Refining research approach and recruiting participants

During Phase 1, we will work with the Council to refine our understanding of the research needs, define our research protocol and begin recruiting participants. Phase 1 will involve the following:

Project initiation meeting: Immediately following contract award, we will meet with the Council's user testing project team commissioning the research. We will ask that the Council shares any background material and in particular the survey findings with BIT in advance of the initiation meeting. We will use this meeting to clarify any aspects of our proposed approach, agree ways of working and discuss our approach to data protection (see below) and participant recruitment.

Workshop to refine research protocol: Roughly 2 weeks after contract award, we will hold a workshop with the Council to refine our research protocol. This will include a discussion to define the research questions the project will answer, brainstorming of approaches to identify and recruit appropriate participants and a presentation by BIT of how the user-testing and interviews will be conducted followed by feedback from the Council team.

Participant recruitment: Following the workshop, BIT will work with the Council to recruit participants. We will agree on an appropriate framework to ensure we have a representative sample of sentencers, for example having an even split of judges and magistrates. Since BIT does not have existing contacts or routes into contacting sentencers, we will rely on the Council advising on the best approach and providing the necessary introductions for BIT to then be able to invite participants to take part.

Drafting research protocol: In parallel to recruiting participants, we will draft the research protocol. This will set out exactly how the research will be conducted, the interview guides that will be used in the user-testing and interviews and how the data will be analysed. While this will not be a formal project deliverable, we will share this with the Council for review and comment.

Phase 2: Carrying out observations and interviews

The research activities with participants will be carried out in Phase 2. In particular this will involve the following:

Observations and virtual usability testing: Data from in-person observations of sentencers in courts and virtual usability testing will address the research questions relating to the access, ease of use and experience of the online sentencing guidelines.

We will aim to recruit 24 participants for the observations and virtual usability testing. We suggest this should be a split of 9 participants for in-person observations and 16 for virtual usability testing sessions. We will start conducting the observations and usability testing sessions before the semi-structured interviews so that we have time to adapt the interview guide based on initial findings.

In-person observations will allow us to examine how sentencers use information on the website at the same time as applying their own knowledge when making sentencing decisions. Relative to remote testing, in-person observations are likely to provide additional detail on the physical, verbal and emotional responses of sentencers when using the guidelines. We will develop an observation proforma to record data during the observations.

Two BIT researchers will spend one day at a magistrates court to carry out observations of mock sentencing decisions. Magistrates sit in groups of three and we would aim to recruit 9 magistrates (3 groups of 3) to each take part in a one hour session. In this session we would observe them making sentencing decisions on 2-3 mock cases. This will be carried out at a magistrates court in London if at all possible to reduce travel costs and prevent any need for additional costs for overnight stays.

Virtual usability testing sessions will be carried out with 16 participants. This will enable us to observe how sentencers navigate the website when carrying out specific tasks. During virtual usability testing sessions, sentencers will be asked to carry out a series of tasks that are reflective of typical use of the online sentencing guidelines. These tasks will be informed by findings from the internal survey and the workshop with the Sentencing Council.

The virtual usability testing sessions will take place via an online platform such as Google Meets or Zoom and will be screen recorded for analysis purposes. Since these sessions are remote, we will be able to include sentencers from a range of geographical locations. However, we acknowledge that this method requires a certain level of computer literacy. We will use the online platform that sentencers are most comfortable with, will provide comprehensive guidance for sentencers ahead of these sessions and allow time at the beginning of each session for any technological queries.

We would work with the Council to recruit sentencers for these research activities. Ideally participants will represent the range of sentencer characteristics as far as possible within our sample size, for example, consider characteristics such as time in service (which has implications for whether sentencers used the paper guidelines before they became digital 2018). We can also build inclusivity into our sampling strategy, e.g. providing additional support for those with lower levels of computer literacy to facilitate their participation.

Semi-structured interviews: We will conduct 12 semi-structured interviews with sentencers of 30-45 minutes in length. Data from the interviews will address topics related to all of the research questions.

We will develop an interview guide informed by previous stages of the research. We suggest that the interviews are semi-structured rather than structured, with some overarching structured questions that align with the research questions but with scope to prompt based on participant responses. This will allow us to fully explore sentencers' experiences of the sentencing guidelines. We may also be able to develop rapid prototype ideas of how the website could be improved and test these with participants to inform our recommendations. Interviews would take place via an online platform to save costs and would be recorded for transcription purposes.

We suggest we include up to 6 sentencers who have participated in the observations and virtual usability testing sessions in our interview sample, using an opt-in approach. This would allow us to build relationships with participants ahead of the interviews and ultimately to triangulate findings across data sources. It would also save on recruitment efforts. However we acknowledge that sentencers may have a demanding workload, and we would work flexibly with sentencers to minimise the burden of participation.

We realise that sentencers who did not participate in previous research activities may have different insights to those who have. We therefore suggest that a further 6 sentencers who have not participated in the observations or usability testing sessions are recruited to take part in an interview. At this stage we may want to target sentencers with specific characteristics that we feel have been underrepresented in the pre-existing sample, if applicable.

Phase 3: Analysis and reporting

Approach to analysis: The usability testing will provide both quantitative and qualitative measures for analysis. Data from the observations and virtual usability testing will be reviewed and categorised, with particular attention paid to: how the website is used, issues encountered whilst performing tasks on the website, actions taken, and comments made (both positive and negative) during the sessions.

Data from the semi-structured interviews would be transcribed and analysed using a Framework¹ approach. The data would be organised into categories, creating a structure for the data that can support in answering the research questions. Analysis of data from both the usability testing and the semi-structured interviews would eventually be integrated to provide comprehensive findings and recommendations across the research questions.

In order to ensure we can achieve the desired sample size for the virtual usability testing within the allocated budget we will use a two track analysis approach:

- In-depth usability analysis of 8 participants: Typically observing more than 8 users interacting with a service delivers rapidly diminishing insights as all of the issues have already been identified. We propose carrying out this in-depth analysis with a sample of the participants.
- Light-touch analysis of 8 participants: This will involve using a reduced analysis protocol for these 8 participants. We will capturing key observations such as whether or not they could complete the required tasks, how long it took them and any clear issues they faced.

This two track approach will allow us to gather more data (and more quantitative data) for a larger sample of users and let us look at any trends in relationships between usability metrics and technical skills. Please do note that even with 24 participants this is not a large enough sample for statistical analysis but obvious trends should emerge.

We would also consider heat mapping as an option for additional usability analysis. Members of our team are experienced with using 3M Visual Attention Software² for various types of website analysis including:

- Heat maps - an easy-to-read visual overview of the salient areas of website design
- Visual Attention Regions - scores the probability of gaining the viewer's attention in the hotspot regions of the heatmap
- Areas of Interest - probability scores on the likelihood specified areas of interest will be seen within the design
- Visual Sequencing - presents the order a person will view the first 4 areas most-likely to be noticed

Using artificial intelligence, these methods of analysis could provide additional insight into how users navigate and interact with the sentencing guidelines website. However, whilst we are aware that these methods are popular in commercial usability testing, we are less certain of the extent to which they would add value on top of the other data collection methods in this research. We are open to further discussion of this option with the Sentencing Council.

Deliverables: We will write up the findings from all research activities in a final report slide-deck, including our key recommendations. Working together with our design team, we will use diagrams, mock-ups and other visual aids to communicate tangible learnings from the research and ensure the content of the slides is both engaging and accessible. We will discuss the final report with key stakeholders and make amendments based on feedback where appropriate.

Project management

We will deliver an insightful research project smoothly and on time by combining our research protocol with strong project management. In this section we detail our proposed timeline for the project along with our project management approach.

Communication and collaboration with the Sentencing Council team

We will ensure that the Council's user testing project team are kept informed and involved in the project throughout. We will agree our ways of working at project initiation but we envisage this involving:

- Weekly meetings or written updates: BIT and the Sentencing Council will have a weekly update meeting or a written update in lieu of a meeting if the Council is content with a written update in certain weeks.
- Designated BIT point of contact: The Council will have designated Point of Contact (POC) in the BIT team who they can direct all questions related to project delivery through.
- Designated BIT project director: There will also be a BIT project director (in this case [REDACTED]) who will be responsible for overall project delivery and will be the point of contact for the Council to escalate any issues or concerns to.

² Website accessible here: <https://vas.3m.com/>

- Participatory workshops and meetings: We will ensure that the Council has sufficient involvement at key points in the project. This will be achieved through workshops involving key BIT and Council staff. These can be held in-person at BIT's London office, the Sentencing Council's office or remotely.

Risks and mitigations

Identifying and mitigating risks on an ongoing basis throughout the project will help to ensure it runs smoothly and on time. At project initiation we will co-produce a complete set of project risks and mitigations with the Sentencing Council team. Based on our prior experience with similar projects we have identified the following risks and mitigation measures:

[REDACTED]

Data protection

Data protection is a key part of any research project. Below we set out our intended approach to data protection on this project. We can discuss and adapt this approach with the Sentencing Council at project initiation.

We assume that BIT will be the data processor and the Sentencing Council will be the data controller. We further assume BIT and the Sentencing Council will agree and sign off on a relevant Data Processing Agreement (if applicable), at project initiation.

Our data processing activities are conducted according to the principles relating to the processing of Personal Data set out in the GDPR, including that Personal Data shall be processed lawfully, fairly and in a transparent manner, and in a manner that ensures the security of the Personal Data. BIT has policies and procedures in place to ensure compliance with these principles. Our data protection and data security policies and procedures reflect necessary legislative requirements, and set out the standard to which BIT staff should work when dealing with Personal Data.

Project timeline

We understand that the Sentencing Council requires the work to be delivered before the end of March 2023. BIT has availability among the appropriate staff to deliver the project within this timeframe.

Based on the assumption that BIT is contracted by w/c 19th September we can deliver according to the project plan set out below. If contracting happens somewhat later (up to one month after this) we remain confident that we will be able to deliver the project by the end of March 2023. However, we will need to compress some of the time we have allocated in the plan below. In particular, it's likely that we will need to recruit participants in a shorter window of time than we have allocated here. This should not affect the quality of the research but will require working collaboratively with the Sentencing Council to ensure that we reach the desired sample size.

The precise timeline of the project will be agreed with the Council at project initiation.

Indicative project timeline assuming that the project is contracted by mid-October

[REDACTED]

Assumptions underpinning the project timeline

- The Sentencing Council will ensure that up to 36 sentencers (both judges and magistrates) are available to participate in interviews and user-testing.
- The Council will support BIT researchers in the scheduling of interviews and in particular in the scheduling of the in-person observations at the magistrates court.
- The Council will work with BIT to develop precise research questions to inform the interview and observation guides and the analysis protocols.

- The Council will provide all necessary background documentation and information (e.g. the survey results) within 1 week of contract award.
- The Council will have the opportunity to provide 2 rounds of comments on the final report.
- The report is not going to be published publicly. We can publish publicly but from our experience that usually requires an additional 3 days of staff time to ensure that it is correctly formatted to meet all of the latest gov.uk guidelines.
- The report itself will be in the format described below.

Project deliverables

The deliverable will be a final report detailing the entire project, our findings and our recommendations. We recommend that the report is in slide deck format to allow for larger visual presentation of the recommended changes to the website design and structure.

Our report will include an executive summary with the key findings and recommendations, an overview of our research protocol, the participant sample, findings from the research and detailed recommendations on how to improve and maximise engagement with the Sentencing Council Guidelines.

The report will be roughly 30-40 pages in length with additional detail related to the research approach in a technical annexe of between 3 and 10 pages. Depending on the Council's needs we can provide a greater or lesser level of detail in the technical annexe.

Budget and resource allocation

The table below sets out the amount of BIT resource that we estimate would be required for each of the necessary project tasks.

[REDACTED]

Costs

The table below describes the mix of BIT staff, day rates and total cost for this work. BIT will cover any staff travel costs within London but costs of travel outside London for observations would be covered by the Sentencing Council.

We believe that the proposed approach here will ensure a robust and insightful project that will deliver value for money for the Council.

Key team members

The project will be staffed by BIT team members with the appropriate mix of project management and qualitative research skills. Based on the current scope and timing of the project we intend to staff the project with the following team members.
