This architectural section drawing illustrates a building complex with a landscaped courtyard. The drawing is divided into three main parts: a building on the left, a central landscaped area, and a building on the right. The left building features a flat roof with a small gabled structure and a large window. The central landscaped area includes several trees of varying sizes and two mounds. The right building has a flat roof and a large window. Elevation markers are present: 104.07, 103.84, 104.12, and 103.1.
