Schedule 2

Specification

1 The Suppliers shall provide the Services in accordance with this Schedule 2.

The specification is as per document 'PS21243 – Specification' in the 'PS21243 - Contract Pack' within folder 'Annex A - Innovate UK Specification' and Wellspring Development Capital Limited's bid response 'PS21243 Wellspring Proposal' and associated documents found within folder 'Annex B - Wellspring Development Capital Limited Bid Submission'.

1. Introduction and background

Innovate UK (IUK) is part of UK Research and Innovation (UKRI), a non-departmental public body funded by a grant-in-aid from the UK government.

IUK drives productivity and economic growth by supporting businesses to develop and realise the potential of new ideas, including those from the UK's world-class research base. With a strong business focus, IUK drives growth by working with companies to de-risk, enable and support innovation.

IUK connects businesses to the partners, customers and investors that can help them turn ideas into commercially successful products and services and business growth. IUK funds business and research collaborations to accelerate innovation and drive business investment into research and development.

IUK supports UK businesses to go global in activities that will help their growth and may also help solve global challenges in partnership with other countries.

UKRI works internationally and has an office in India to enhance research and innovation collaboration between the UK and India. India is one of the world's fastest growing economies and a major research power – UKRI India drives shared prosperity and advances joint development goals.

The UK spends a significant and growing proportion of its GDP on healthcare costs due to diet related disease; 4.7million people in England have Type 2 diabetes and 7.4 million have heart and circulatory disease. Poor diet is a significant risk factor. India has a population of nearly 1.4 billion and whilst the prevalence of obesity in India varies due to age, gender, geographical environment, socio-economic status, etc., according to a study in 2015, prevalence rate of obesity and central obesity varies from 11.8% to 36.3%. In India, abdominal obesity is one of the major risk factors for cardiovascular disease. Both countries have expertise in food science and nutrition, and similar challenges are faced, with the Public Health Foundation of India citing non-communicable diseases and public health nutrition as two key research areas. IUK wishes to carry out research to understand where the UK and India could share knowledge and expertise to develop innovations to help to solve these public health challenges.

IUK has an interest in supporting industry focussed collaborative research and development in the area of enhancing food quality, including:

- Optimising nutritional composition of food – including technologies to reduce fat, sugar and salt, and improve fibre content of foods, and technologies to extract value from waste streams to improve the nutritional value of foods.
- Novel functional food ingredients – foods with specific health benefits, including fortified and biofortified foods.
- Plant-based and alternative proteins – alternative protein sources for healthier and more sustainable diets, and processes to incorporate into food products that are accepted by consumers.

- 'Healthy' by design – products designed for maximum bioavailability of nutrients during digestion.
- Decision support tools to enable better food/diet choices – smart fridges, home robotics, automation, wearables, and smart food intake trackers.

The aim of this research project is to investigate shared linkages and opportunities between the UK and India in the areas of food and nutrition research and innovation. The UK-India Roadmap highlights non-communicable diseases as a key area, with innovation an important tool to address this challenge.

2. Aims & Objectives

The aims of this research are to gain a comprehensive view of the challenges and opportunities faced within India and UK in the areas of food and nutrition, and an understanding of UK and India capabilities.

The team commissioning this research is the Innovate UK AgriFood team which has expertise in the areas of agriculture, food and nutrition, and work closely with the Emerging Economies team with expertise in international development. There will be one main point of contact for this project.

The approach should primarily use desktop research using available market data and reports, with consultations with key stakeholders (including internal UKRI stakeholders) to inform and validate findings. We would also like you to carry out a small scoping workshop to bring together a mix of researchers, key government policy makers and industry participants from both countries to understand the trends in food and nutrition, and horizon scan.

The objectives of the project are to be able to understand the shared challenges, capabilities and expertise between the UK and India in the area of nutrition, diet and health and to be able to recommend where the UK and India can work together to solve these public health challenges.

By doing this research we want:

- To understand the extent of the challenge of diet-related diseases within the UK and India. It is important to understand if there are major regional / demographic differences in such a large country as India, compared to the UK.
- To understand the food and nutrition innovation priorities of the UK and India, key investments, infrastructures and policies.
- To understand the public health systems as well as innovation capacity/capability and market size in relation to enhancing food quality.
- To identify key strengths/areas for development and unique country circumstances and opportunities for collaboration in relation to enhancing food quality.
- To understand the capacity and capability of industry and academic institutions in research and innovation in diet and nutrition, food science, food technology and reformulation/fortification technologies, in the UK and India.
- To understand the shared challenges and potential solutions between the UK and India, in terms of diet related disease and potential solutions to enhance food quality.
- To identify, understand and prioritise potential strategic opportunities for international collaboration in food and nutrition innovation in order to strengthen national innovation and competitiveness and complement ongoing activity in the UK.
- To provide evidence to steer the development of strategic government and institutional level international partnerships for deep and long-term innovation collaboration.
- To provide evidence to support the business case to secure funding for future IUK and India food and nutrition innovation activities.
- To provide recommendations for how the UK and India could work together on a joint programme of research and innovation in the future.
- To produce both a full version and public-facing version report of the analysis and recommendations.

3. Scope

The geographical scope of the project is the whole of the UK and India, however we recognise that a regional approach to the research may be beneficial for the future recommendations part of the project.

Travel to India is not within the scope of this project.

4. Requirement

The project should consist of qualitative and quantitative research, a desk-based exercise looking at capabilities in UK and India, and the specific challenges faced by each country in relation to non-communicable diseases, for example Type 2 diabetes. In addition, stakeholder interviews a small online scoping workshop (industry, government, academic) to understand the specific challenges faced across India will contribute to the development of a roadmap for collaborative working between India and the UK to develop solutions.

Outputs are to include:

- Delivery of a small scoping workshop (online) with participants from UK and India. IUK is able to provide key contacts to begin this process.
- A full report consisting of analysis and recommendations, including:
 - A review of the challenge of non-communicable diseases in India and the UK to understand the shared challenges and potential solutions between the UK and India.
 - A review of the food and nutrition innovation priorities of the UK and India, key investments, infrastructures and policies
 - A review of the existing capacity and capability of industry and academic institutions in research and innovation of diet and nutrition, food science, food technology and reformulation/fortification technologies, in the UK and India.
 - A review of the key strengths/areas for development and unique country circumstances and opportunities for collaboration.
 - Analysis to understand and prioritise potential strategic opportunities for collaboration in food and nutrition innovation in order to strengthen national innovation and competitiveness and complement ongoing activity in the UK.
 - Evidence to steer the development of strategic government and institutional level international partnerships for deep and long-term innovation collaboration, and to support the business case to secure funding for future IUK and India food and nutrition innovation activities.
 - Recommendations for how the UK and India could work together on a joint programme of research and innovation in the future.
 - A roadmap of research and innovation to develop solutions to the diet related challenges faced by the UK and India.
- A public-facing summary report.

5. Timetable
