The Authority shall take all reasonable steps to mitigate such additional expenditure. Where the Contract is terminated under Clause 15 (Termination) of this Schedule 2 no further payments shall be made by the Authority to the Contractor (for Services supplied by the Contractor prior to termination and in accordance with the Contract but where the payment has yet to be made by the Authority), until the Authority has established the final cost of arranging an alternative Contractor of the Services.

- 18.2. If the dispute is not resolved at that meeting, the Parties can attempt to settle it by mediation using the Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution (“CEDR”) Model Mediation Procedure current at the time of the dispute. DHSC_OHID_HPVS SELF-SAMPLING COST EFFECTIVENESS MODEL

- 21.3. If the Contractor is the Affected Party, it shall not be entitled to claim relief under this Clause 21 (Force Majeure) to the extent that consequences of the relevant Force Majeure Event:
- 21.3.1. are capable of being mitigated, but the Contractor has failed to do so;

 - 21.3.3. are the result of the Contractor's failure to comply with its BCDR Plan (except to the extent that such failure is also due to a Force Majeure Event that affects the execution of the BCDR Plan).
- 21.4. Subject to Clause 21.5, as soon as practicable after the Affected Party issues the Force Majeure Notice, and at regular intervals thereafter, the Parties shall consult in good faith and use reasonable endeavours to agree any steps to be taken and an appropriate timetable in which those steps should be taken, to enable continued provision of the Services affected by the Force Majeure Event.
- 21.5. The Parties shall at all times following the occurrence of a Force Majeure Event and during its subsistence use their respective reasonable endeavours to prevent and mitigate the effects of the Force Majeure Event. Where the Contractor is the Affected Party, it shall take all steps in accordance with Good Industry Practice to overcome or minimise the consequences of the Force Majeure Event.
- 21.6. Where, as a result of a Force Majeure Event:
- 21.6.1. an Affected Party fails to perform its obligations in accordance with this Contract, then during the continuance of the Force Majeure Event:
 - (a) the other Party shall not be entitled to exercise any rights to terminate this Contract in whole or in part as a result of such failure other than pursuant to Clause 21.7; and
 - (b) neither Party shall be liable for any Default arising as a result of such failure;

1. Background

1.1. The health problem

In the UK, cervical cancer is the 14th most common cancer in females. There are approximately 3,200 (9.6 per 100,000) new cases of cervical cancer every year, accounting for 2% of all new cancer cases in females (2016-2018). (1) In England, around 51% of women diagnosed with cervical cancer survive their disease for 10 years or more (2013-2017).(1)

1.2. Screening Programme

Cervical cancer screening, which has been implemented for at least five decades, aims to detect precancerous lesions that can be treated before cancer develops. (2, 3)

Up until recently, cervical screening was based on cytology. However, there has been well-established evidence that infection with human papillomavirus (HPV, a sexually transmitted virus) is a necessary cause of cervical cancer. (4) Although most types of HPV are benign and clear up with no intervention, (5) a small proportion of 'high-risk' types of HPV infection persist and can lead to cervical cancer. (5,6) High-risk HPV is found in 99.7% of cervical cancers. HPV types 16 and 18 are particularly high-risk and contribute to around 70% of all cervical cancers. (7) A report in 2017 estimated that 3.2% of women in the general population have cervical HPV-16/18, increasing to 29.6% in women with low-grade cervical lesions, 58.6% in women with high-grade cervical lesions, and 79% in women with invasive cervical cancers. (8,9)

Given the instrumental role of the HPV high-risk strains in the aetiology of cervical cancer, along with the introduction of the HPV vaccination programme in 2008, there was a strong rationale for the implementation of primary HPV screening in the UK, reserving cytology testing for HPV positive women only. The UK NSC recommended the use of the test for HPV as a primary screening test in 2017. (10) Following this recommendation, a national programme of primary HPV screening was fully implemented in Wales (2018), England (2019) and Scotland (2020). Northern Ireland is in the process of implementation.

Primary HPV screening is when the first test carried out on the sample looks for the high-risk HPV virus first. If high-risk HPV is detected, a cytology test is used as a triage to check for any abnormal cells. Please refer to the cervical screening care pathway for more information on the screening pathway.

1.3. HPV self-sampling

The move to primary HPV screening in the UK provides an opportunity to change the method of sample collection and allows women and other people with a cervix¹ to self-collect a vaginal or urine sample at home via a self-sampling device.

Coverage in the UK cervical screening programme has been below the acceptable standard for many years, with a number of those invited choosing not to attend. As such, the offer of a self-sampling kit has the potential to increase engagement with the offer of cervical screening and therefore could have a positive impact in reducing the incidence of cervical cancer.

The UK NSC currently does not recommend HPV self-sampling in the NHS Cervical Screening Programme (CSP). In 2017, the UK NSC commissioned an external review of HPV self-sampling to find out about the potential of HPV self-sampling to improve the performance of the CSP.(11) The review identified several evidence gaps.

In 2019, the UK NSC requested an in-service evaluation (ISE) of HPV self-sampling to address the evidence gaps from the 2017 review. The aim of the ISE is to provide the UK NSC with good quality, robust evidence on the clinical effectiveness, feasibility, acceptability, and cost-effectiveness in the use of HPV self-sampling in the CSP. Evidence from the ISE will support a definitive recommendation by the UK NSC to the four UK nations. The ISE is currently being commissioned by the National Institute for Health and Care Research's (NIHR) Health Technology Assessment programme.

¹ Sometimes referred to as 'women' from herein for the purpose of sentence brevity only.

2. The requirement

2.1. Decision problem, key questions, and objectives

The HPV self-sampling ISE will offer a portion of people with a cervix eligible for cervical screening in England the choice between a clinician taken sample and a self-sample for HPV.

The UK NSC is looking to appoint a competent Contractor to undertake a model-based health economic evaluation to determine the cost-effectiveness of introducing the option of HPV self-sampling in the CSP. In addition, to determine the scenarios under which benefits will outweigh harms. This is particularly important given that testing for HPV on a vaginal or urine self-sample could be slightly less accurate than a clinician taken cervical sample. Therefore, modelling is required to understand how the self-sampling offer could impact on the number of screen-detected HPV and treated cervical lesions under different uptake scenarios.

Similar work has been conducted in The Netherlands.⁽¹²⁾ There is little and uncertain evidence for this in the UK context at present.

The key question is:

Under what scenario(s) is the offer of a choice of HPV self-sampling or clinician taken sampling in the UK Cervical Screening Programme clinically and cost effective?

The key objectives:

- To support a high-quality and evidence-based ISE, cost-effectiveness modelling is required to understand the conditions under which benefits will outweigh harms at a reasonable cost for the offer of HPV self-sampling in the UK CSP. This should include different test accuracies (sensitivity and specificity) as a core strategy for the modelling.
- Specifically, the objective of the project is to provide a model assessing the impact of a range of screening strategies as below on clinical and cost outcomes;
 - Different self-sampling test accuracies (sensitivity and specificity)
 - different kit delivery strategy (mail to all, opt-in etc.),
 - participant characteristics (vaccination status, age etc.) and
 - behaviours (screening uptake, switching etc.) on the detection and treatment of CIN
- To provide evidence to inform an optimal delivery and/or monitoring strategy for the HPV self-sampling in-service evaluation estimated to start in 2025.

2.2 Potential Scope

This model will project and compare different screening strategies and their impact on health benefits, harms, resource use and costs associated with the introduction of a choice between self-sampling and clinician taken sampling in the Cervical Screening Programme. The scope of the decision problem is briefly outlined below.

Contractors should use the information below to propose their approach to model development. The final scope will be discussed between the UK NSC team and the modelling team after award of contract.

Target population	General population of vaccinated and unvaccinated people with a cervix aged 25 to 64 years that are asymptomatic for cervical cancer
Setting and location	Cervical cancer screening programme in the UK
Perspective on health outcomes	All direct health effects to participants
Perspective on costs	Cost to the UK National Health Service and Personal Social Services
Intervention(s)	The offer of a choice between self-sampling and clinician taken sampling to all eligible participants of the UK Cervical Screening Programme
Strategies and scenario analyses	Different population demographics (age, ethnicity, deprivation, screening history) Immunisation assumptions – vaccination uptake and prevalence (different strands of HPV; current or one dose only; girls only or gender neutral) Different screening uptake and coverage Different levels of switching from clinician to self-sample Different test accuracies (sensitivity and specificity)* Different triage scenarios Different intervals Different kit delivery strategies for self-sampling; mail to all, opt-in or hybrid (for example expressed as uptake figure assumptions) Assumptions about prevalence of disease

	*Please note that a key aim of the model is to provide guidance on the extent to which a self-sample can be less accurate than a clinician sample, before the number of screen-detected women with CIN2 will fall, and the offer cannot be safely made to all women (and should be made to the non-attenders only, for example).
Comparator(s)	Work to identify the most appropriate comparator(s) will be required but the following may be considered: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Current practice (clinician taken sampling only) • The offer of clinician taken sampling to all eligible participants of the UK Cervical Screening Programme and the offer of a choice between self-sampling and clinician taken sampling for all non-attenders of the programme only.
Time horizon	Lifetime
Health outcomes	Key outcomes include but are not limited to the following: Primary: QALYs gained Secondary: Cervical cancer mortality; incidence of cervical cancer; incidence of CIN
Cost outcomes	Monetary terms using UK unit costs related to the NHS, including but not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • laboratory costs of conducting screening and confirmatory tests • short- and long-term treatment costs to health and social care services • screening administration costs • screening programme quality assurance costs
Cost-effectiveness outcomes	Incremental costs (exploded view for clear presentation of logistic burden of a screening programme) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Incremental clinical effectiveness (as measured by benefits and harms in health outcomes section) • Incremental cost-effectiveness ratios (costs per life year and QALY gained) and/or net monetary or net health benefit under different willingness-to-pay thresholds.

Model development and stakeholder involvement

Contractors should outline in their bids a suggested model structure that fulfils the objectives and decision problem of this project. The model structure should be justified with reference to the natural history and clinical pathway.

Contractors should also outline in their bids their likely sources of data (at a high-level, or in detail where appropriate) for the model inputs, and how uncertainties related to parameter estimates will be addressed.

It is expected that the final model will be developed in an iterative process in consultation with clinical experts and other stakeholders after award of contract.

Contractors should outline in their bids how they will ensure that expert clinical or other elicitation is embedded throughout the project, to ensure the development of a robust model.

Therefore, the approach to developing the model should be inclusive and transparent. Discussion with stakeholders is encouraged to develop a shared set of assumptions to ensure that the model represents disease processes appropriately and adequately addresses the decision problem.

Consideration should be given on whether a steering group is necessary throughout the duration of the project. There should be a minimum of two workshops, in addition to expert elicitation exercises which might be identified in the ongoing scoping work. The total number of workshops and their function will need to be finalised in discussions with the UK NSC team.

The Contractor will be required to organise and run all workshops and expert elicitation exercises.

Ongoing dialogue should continue with stakeholders throughout the project by email and online meetings, as necessary.

Inputs and assumptions defined with reference to expert opinion should be clearly identifiable from those derived from published sources. The mechanism for incorporating these into the model should be described (e.g. selection of experts, extrapolation of primary study outcomes beyond the study follow-up period).

In-service evaluation

As previously mentioned, the UK NSC has recommended to start an in-service evaluation (ISE) of the offer of a choice of self-sampling and clinician taken sampling in the UK Cervical Screening Programme.

The research/evaluation of the ISE is being commissioned through the National Institute for Health and Care Research (NIHR) and will likely commence in 2025.

The requirement for the Contractor will be to attend meetings and provide input and expertise into any ISE planning, if this is required. Where this is available and timings are appropriate, the model may be updated with data from the ISE.

2.3 Results, discussion and dissemination

The results are to be organised in text and tables. The key resource use in physical units should be presented separately and then combined with unit costs. Ideally, outcomes should also be presented in their natural units for each strategy and then as QALYs for each strategy. The model should detail the data on average and incremental cost, average and incremental QALYs (or other outcome if appropriate), and the incremental cost-effectiveness ratios for all strategies. The factors which drive costs and benefits should be summarised.

The discussion section should cover the interpretation and validity of the findings of the model in light of the evidence, its stability, and methodology. The findings should also be discussed in relation to previous health economic assessments in this area to enable a comparison with current findings. The key strengths and limitations of the model and their likely influence on the estimates should be discussed. Policy implications should be stated and key evidence gaps, future research implications, and further points for discussion should be highlighted.

A report should be provided to the UK NSC on the development and outcomes of the model using appropriate and robust frameworks, such as the CHEERS2 checklist. However, please note that these are the minimally acceptable reporting standards for the methods and the results, and that more detail may be required.

The Contractor will be required to present the final model at the UK NSC meeting, including some UK NSC reference groups meetings.

If necessary, the Contractor will be required to update the report based on feedback from UK NSC reference groups, any public consultation and UK NSC.

Finally, the review/modelling team will work with the UK NSC team to publish the model in a peer-reviewed journal. The Contractor will lead and manage the submission of the manuscript to a peer review journal, including performing a full quality check and formatting the document in line with the journal's requirements, drafting a cover letter and managing the submission process as well as the receipt and implementation of any peer-review comments. The UK NSC team will contribute towards addressing any peer-review comments on the manuscript, if needed. If the first journal submission is rejected, the Contractor will be responsible for managing resubmissions to alternative journals. The UK NSC evidence team will contribute towards drafting resubmissions, if needed.

2.4. Resource

The delivery team require modelling experts including at least one expert with knowledge and experience of cancer screening. In addition, knowledge, understanding and previous experience of working in the field of cervical cancer and HPV self-sampling would be preferable. As above, contractors should also outline in their bids how they will ensure that expert clinical or other elicitation is embedded throughout the project, to ensure the development of a robust model.

2.5. Project outputs

Deliverables will likely include the following:

- Model Specifications: Development of a model to determine the conditions under which the introduction of self-sampling in the cervical screening programme provides the most benefits in terms of clinical outcomes for women and cost-effectiveness for the programme.
- Cost effectiveness model: Running of model and analysis of cost-effectiveness.
- Model Technical Report: Interim report(s) by Spring 2025, to feed into the ISE design process.
- Model: Final report(s) in Spring 2026 clearly outlining model type, analytical approach, assumptions, uncertainties, results, and discussion, including implications to policy.
- It is expected that the final paper is published in a peer-reviewed journal to highlight the high-quality and robust work required.
- Transfer of the model's outputs to the UK NSC, as a minimum, and as specified in the contract terms.
