QUESTION 12: In your own words, however short or long, please tell us how you felt viewing the memorial wall:

Children asked questions

Just Interested in viewing

Found very moving, always get upset at these type of things. Staggering how many people are on there. But a very well done space. Everything is at same height so not too hard to read.

The picture makes you think - the people that lost lives at sea.

With door - not quite sure fire exit sign before the door

Very poignant. The trees are picked well, should stay green all year round which is what you want. Signage is understated, but understandable as not all would want to go through the emotions.

Had query about specific names on the wall, directed to Gosport VC staff to contact VEM or main museum. Said could spend hours in here, has been put together very well. Gentleman said Gosport site seems like the poor relation to PHD but is easily just as interesting.

Question 13: Is there anything else you would improve about the space? (Please provide as much detail as you would like to)

More colourful plants, a little plain.

The signage just indicates a garden not much explanation of what is there. There's no explanation of what the ranks mean and more explanation of what is being looked at would be helpful. A nice space however. Started at marina end then went back into main building.

The sign near the end that explains all people listed were on active service - only at the end and small in size.

The sign into the garden of remembrance from outside is very small, easy to miss it or to know what it actually contains. The space is fine - guessing it has to be quite somber really.

Nothing to add, everything clear.

Interesting to know about submarines

Benches are a really good idea. Perhaps running water - as it's a garden, more feng shui.

A key to understand ranks would be really good, not all people will know what those ranks were, just a poster or something on wall with ranks listed abbreviations etc. Woman in party had vision impairment, had to get right up to the inscription of any listing to see it clearly.

No signs it's very hidden
