7. Deliverables	Goods: Not applicable Services: The Specification of Requirements and scope of services is outlined below as opposed to being attached in the appendix. Aim and objective The aim of the contracted task is to support activities that will strengthen the capacity of Tanzania to diagnose brucellosis in their human population. This will be through the implementation of the Rose Bengal Test (RBT) into the routine testing of human serum samples at the Kilimanjaro Christian Medical Centre (KCMC). It is anticipated this will improve diagnostic accuracy and therefore patient treatment. It will also provide human prevalence data that can be used to direct policies for control of brucellosis. The funding will also support activities to communicate the anticipated improvements to other clinical stakeholders across Tanzania and policy makers with the aim of rolling this approach and its benefits out further across the country. Brucellosis is a disease of livestock that can be transmitted to humans via direct contact with parturition and abortion material (the disease frequently causes infected animal to abort) and via consumption of unpasteurised dairy products. In humans the disease causes fever which, in tropical climates, may often be mistaken for malaria and thus be ineffectively treated with potentially lifelong health complications for patients. Current human diagnostic methods most commonly used in many parts of Africa, where the disease is endemic in livestock, are extremely
