Introduction

Ensuring access to secure, affordable energy supplies is one of the Government's top priorities. The Capacity Market, introduced by the Energy Act 2013, is intended to ensure sufficient investment in the overall level of reliable capacity (both supply and demand side) for secure electricity supply in GB. This is achieved through annual auctions which competitively set a price for capacity. Currently the Capacity Market is in a "standstill period", while the European Commission considers its State Aid approval following the ruling by the General Court of the Court of Justice of the EU (CJEU) on the 15th November 2018. However, analytical development work relating to the mechanism continues during this period.

A 'Panel of Technical Experts' (PTE) has been in existence since 2013. The PTE originally focussed on a wide range of issues relating to Electricity Market Reform (EMR), but in 2015 the role of the PTE was re-focussed on the Capacity Market and an additional member recruited to reflect the evolving role of the Panel and new expertise required. It remains essential that the analytical development work carried out by National Grid and the decisions relating to the Capacity Market (in particular the volumes of capacity to be procured through the auctions) are subject to independent scrutiny to verify that the work carried out is as transparent, robust and as up-to-date as possible.

The Department for Business, Energy & Industrial Strategy (BEIS) are now seeking to reappoint a five-member PTE, offering each member a three year contract. The membership of the panel will be drawn from both academia and industry covering areas such as electrical engineering, project finance, and economics.

Background to the Requirement

The Government's number one priority is to ensure that families and businesses have a secure, affordable, clean energy supply that they can rely on now and into the future. The Capacity Market is the Government's main tool for ensuring that electricity remains available during times of high demand, such as cold winters.

The Capacity Market secures electricity capacity, mainly power plant and Demand Side Response, through competitive auctions. A price is set competitively for capacity through annual auctions. Targets for the auction are set to ensure there is enough capacity available to meet peak electricity demand. Electricity providers then bid into a Capacity Auction, promising if they win a contract that they will be available to provide electricity when needed. In return, they will receive a steady payment on top of the electricity that they sell. If they fail to deliver energy when needed, they face penalties.

How much capacity is auctioned is guided by the reliability standard. Each year, the Delivery Body (National Grid) sets out how much capacity is needed to meet the reliability standard and will provide a recommendation to Government on the amount of capacity needed to be secured for a particular capacity year. This will be based on National Grid's assessment of different scenarios for the level of electricity demand and the amount of capacity provided by power plants, which are not eligible for capacity payments, e.g. low carbon generation. National Grid's assessment also serves as the basis for determining other auction parameters, including the de-rating factors for interconnectors.

The Government will ultimately take the final decision over how much capacity to procure for each capacity year and set the auction parameters. This may require trade-offs between different objectives and therefore it is essential that the impacts of different decisions are well understood.

The purpose of the Panel is to impartially scrutinise, and quality assure the analysis carried out by National Grid, the choice of modelling methodology employed, the inputs to that analysis and the outputs from that analysis. These are scrutinised in terms of the inputs and methods applied. The Panel tests whether the analysis is robust and fit for the purpose of Government taking key policy decisions on the Capacity Market and also considers potential conflicts of interest National Grid or others involved might have in influencing the analysis.

The make-up of the Panel is intended to provide a range of professional analytical skills, bringing diverse practical experiences of the GB electricity market and knowledge of a range of generation technologies. The Panel members are independent members in their own right. They are not representatives of any current or previous employers, trade associations or membership organisations.

Aims

BEIS is seeking to appoint an Mathematician/Econometrician/Statistician expert to sit on the Panel of Technical Experts on a three-year contract.

The PTE's role is to provide assurance that the analysis provided by National Grid in regard to the Capacity Market mechanism has been scrutinised by an independent body and there are no conflicts of interest which might skew the analysis. This is in addition to the Department's own assurance process.

Consequently, the Panel's independent and impartial scrutiny will provide additional confidence to Government and industry that Government's decisions are informed by robust and up-to-date analysis that is fit for purpose. It is not the Panel's task to evaluate or advise on the Government's policies or objectives in this area. Its sole remit is to perform a technical scrutiny of the analysis.

Objectives

BEIS is looking for an expert with GB electricity market knowledge and a range of the skills and expertise described in the Requirements Section below.

Depending on the workload associated with each stage of the process, the Panel member is expected to work from 0 to 5 days per month. This will include attendance, normally in person, at BEIS' offices in central London for Panel meetings, with the busiest period being the months leading up to the publication of the Panel's annual report in early July.

The prime focus of the Panel member's work is the scrutiny of the Electricity Capacity Report (ECR) by National Grid. It is the Panel member's task to scrutinise the modelling methodology employed by National Grid, the outputs as well as the inputs to the analysis and the methods applied for their recommendation to the Secretary of State regarding the upcoming Capacity Market auction(s). The Panel is in place to ensure independent assurance that the analysis is robust and fit for the purpose of Government decision-making. The Panel is also to consider potential conflicts of interest National Grid or others involved might have in influencing the analysis. In particular, the Panel will work alongside BEIS and National Grid throughout the course of the annual report cycle to scrutinise and improve developments National Grid propose to their analysis. Where applicable, the Panel may make alternative suggestions for the methodology employed or may refer to existing research by themselves or third parties, which has been appropriately peer reviewed, that they deem relevant.

Scope

The PTE's task is to scrutinise National Grid's analysis for the Capacity Market to ensure that it is robust, up-to-date and transparent. As such, it does not evaluate or advise on Government's policies or objectives in this area. Its remit is to perform a technical scrutiny of the Delivery Body's analysis. This independent and impartial scrutiny provides additional confidence to Government, industry and the public that Government's decisions are informed by robust analysis that is fit for purpose. The work of the PTE is to be transparent and the conclusions of the PTE will be published.

The work of the Panel follows an annual cycle, concluding with the publication of a PTE report alongside National Grid's Electricity Capacity Report (ECR) in June/July each year. In more detail, the work of the Panel includes:

- Review of the ECR modelling methodology and techniques used;
- Assessment of the underlying assumptions and how National Grid's Future Energy Scenarios are used in the sensitivity and scenario analysis;
- Review of National Grid's ECR report;
- Publication of a final report alongside National Grid's ECR report;
- Scrutinise National Grid's CM Development Projects undertaken to support the annual parameter setting process.

The Panel will ensure that ministers will have robust advice and analysis to make the most cost-effective decisions relating to the capacity market. The advice from National Grid, together with the independent scrutiny of the analysis through the Panel, is to enable ministers to set e.g. the optimal volume of capacity to be secured whilst weighing up costs and the impact of different options on key departmental objectives.

The Panel's conclusions do not have to reach a consensus with BEIS, National Grid or indeed among all Panel members. However, where strongly divergent views exist they must be clearly explained in the Panel's reports.

Requirement

BEIS are seeking appoint an Mathematician/Econometrician/Statistician to join the five-person panel of technical experts. The successful candidate will have an understanding of applying quantitative techniques to future decision-making and making decisions under conditions of uncertainty in the context of electricity markets in GB and beyond. Technical expertise of the supply and/or demand side of the GB electricity market is essential. This expertise should be focused on the GB electricity market including its interactions with other European electricity markets. Together with the other panel members the candidate will provide the service of scrutinising the Delivery Body's (National Grid) analysis. The Panel will usually not be expected to conduct its own research but to scrutinise and review the analysis provided. However, if Panel members have produced relevant work, which has been subject to appropriate peer review, the findings of the work may inform Panel members' discussions.

We will expect a high level of general policy awareness (e.g. to understand the implications of relevant regulatory changes that may be forthcoming). The Panel member will also need to be used to working in a team and expertise in providing advice to policy-makers.

Knowledge:

- An understanding of GB or international electricity market industry;
- Expertise of strategic senior decision-making or advisory roles to support senior decision-making in energy markets;
- Expertise of carrying out analysis and/or modelling of the GB electricity market;
- Knowledge of electricity networks and balancing;
- Knowledge of the GB Capacity Market (its history and current challenges) and other capacity mechanisms;
- Knowledge of Great Britain, Northern Ireland and European energy policies together with a knowledge and understanding of Electricity Market Reform;
- Knowledge of interconnection between GB and other energy markets;
- Knowledge of conventional and low-carbon generation technologies and operations (including emerging technologies and demand side response);
- An appreciation of the issues facing the GB electricity market in the next 8-10 years
- General policy awareness of topical issues (including relevant legislation or regulatory changes including in the EU, interaction between different parts of the market, batteries and hybrid sites, distributed generation);
- Understanding of working in Panels and/or other decision-making processes providing advice for policy decisions.

Other Skills:

- Team working - the panel members are expected to work together, and with National Grid, BEIS and Ofgem, effectively and provide a written report to Government in the timescales set out, so good team working against challenging deadlines and within a set scope as well as the ability to deal with conflicts in a team is essential;
- Clear communication both written and oral - in order to present information both formally and informally to National Grid, BEIS and Ofgem. In addition, the PTE's final reports will be published publicly on the Government website so the ability to explain complex findings in plain English and for different target audiences would be essential;
- Flexibility, to allow for the ad-hoc and diverse nature of the work and the ability to work to tight deadlines;
- Absence of appropriate data/ methodologies/ models – The Panel may conclude that for specific issues the data or methodologies required are not available. It may suggest new methods or develop alternatives.
- Ensuring that the final report is clear and focussed – Panel reports will necessarily be written by different authors with possibly diverging views. However, the final report needs to be consistent and readable. The Panel will also need to ensure that their reports remain within the set scope despite many issues in the energy market being interrelated.

The Panel member will act as an independent expert and must ensure that there are no conflicts of interest that would risk the Panel's ability to perform its functions independently.

Expected time Commitment

Depending on the stage in the process, the Panel member is expected to work from 0 to a maximum of 5 days per month. Historically, the average Panel member billing has been for about 20 days over the whole year. This encompasses, amongst others, attendance at Panel meetings, reviewing methodologies, scenarios and National Grid reports as well as writing informal notes and the formal report at the end of the annual process. The chair may be expected to work an additional 2 days per annum. We would expect the Chair to take on some additional tasks such as coordinating report writing.

The timings for many stages of the analysis may be tight, so the PTE will need to be highly flexible and able to work to time in order not to create delays for the wider project. In particular, the June deadline for the publication of the final report in early July is fixed and members need to ensure they have sufficient time available to contribute to the preparation of the report in the weeks and months ahead of the report's publication. It will be for the PTE to decide under the coordination of their Chair how tasks will be distributed among Members to deliver set milestones, based also on individual member's availability.
