• Introduction

1.1 About the CRCRM scheme

UK Research and Innovation (UKRI) is seeking to procure an independent evaluation of a pilot funding opportunity, the Cross Research Council Responsive Mode (CRCRM) pilot scheme.

UKRI, established in April 2018 by uniting seven disciplinary research councils along with Research England and Innovate UK, is committed to fostering a dynamic research and innovation landscape in the UK with an annual investment of £8 billion. As part of its Corporate Plan \(2022-25\) and its dedication to breaking down silos in interdisciplinary research, UKRI has implemented an innovative £65 million CRCRM pilot scheme and is now inviting proposals for an independent evaluation of the scheme. The CRCRM scheme is a pioneering initiative designed to nurture emerging interdisciplinary research by bridging diverse fields and will address a gap in UKRI's current provision identified by the 2015 Nurse Review and the 2022 Grant Review by supporting research that covers disciplines from two or more of our seven research councils; these are the:

- Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC)
- Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC)
- Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC)
- Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC)
- Medical Research Council (MRC)
- Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) and the
- Science and Technology Facilities Council (STFC).

This scheme complements the existing council responsive mode schemes and will enhance knowledge, economy and societal impact.

1.2 Key features

The CRCRM scheme involves:

- Interdisciplinary projects which must involve disciplines from the remits of at least two research councils
- A two-stage process, including an assessed outline stage followed by invitation to an assessed full application stage
- The appointment and training of a college of experts, the Interdisciplinary Assessment College (IAC)
- A novel assessment process
- Monitoring and evaluation in real time.

1.7 Evaluation of the CRCRM pilot scheme

UKRI is committed to rigorous evaluation of all our key programmes. As a pilot scheme adopting a novel assessment approach, this is a learning process, and we are developing and delivering the scheme in real time and working closely with our colleagues and the research community to rapidly learn and apply lessons from the first round to the benefit of the second round. We expect our assessors and applicants to be key in feeding into an evaluation process.

The primary aim of the evaluation is to assess the appropriateness (process evaluation) of the CRCRM scheme and its effectiveness (impact evaluation) to understand in the short term:

- the demand from the research community for the CRCRM scheme,
- whether our investment is meeting a funding gap, and
- to generate evidence and learning to inform future interdisciplinary funding opportunities and assessment processes.

The independent evaluation will run until April 2026, and will form part of a wider UKRI monitoring and evaluation activity which includes ongoing reporting led by the UKRI Interdisciplinary Responsive Mode (IRM) team, and a strategic project undertaken by the Innovation Research Caucus (IRC) to inform process improvements between Rounds 1 and 2.

Table 1 sets out how these three components will fit together to answer the full set of evaluation questions.

Table 2 sets out the timetable for deliverables required through this contract.

The Logic Model at Table 3 sets out our understanding of how the scheme will bring about change and impact. For the purposes of this commission, we are interested in evaluating processes and the impact of these processes on the immediate short-term outputs, i.e. the impact of awards on the funding portfolio.

• Aims & Objectives

This independent evaluation, in combination with other aspects of the evaluation outlined in section 6, will help UKRI to understand the demand for the new CRCRM scheme and whether the funding mechanism and its assessment process is leading to the development and funding of interdisciplinary research, thereby addressing a gap in the UKRI portfolio of funding opportunities.

2.1 Evaluation Aims

The aims of the evaluation are to:

1. Understand if and how the scheme, and its processes are of high quality, are efficient and effective in the assessment of IDR applications across all disciplines to inform best practice and approaches for the support of IDR moving forward
2. Understand how and to what extent the scheme's processes have enabled the effective assessment and funding of new interdisciplinary research and impacted perceptions of IDR support in the UK funding landscape.
3. Understand the impact of the scheme on the nature of the applications and the portfolio of awards supported through the scheme, specifically focused on
 - a. the extent to which new research and people are being supported and how they differ from that funded by other UKRI schemes, to inform best practice and approach for supporting IDR moving forward
 - b. the extent to which and how the research and innovation (R&I) communities' perceptions and behaviours have changed, with respect to funding routes for IDR
 - c. how the outcomes and impact of the IDR funded differ (if at all) from other responsive mode schemes

2.2 Evaluation Objectives

The objectives of the evaluation are to:

1. Enable UKRI to improve processes for a second round of scheme (particularly in terms of efficiency and user experience).
2. Inform evidence-based decisions as to the success and value of this scheme and improve future strategic approaches to funding IDR.
3. Evidence to what extent, and how, the new process effectively assesses new interdisciplinary research that may struggle to find a home or be assessed fairly through existing responsive mode schemes.
4. Inform improvements for the CRCRM mechanisms and responsive mode schemes more generally on supporting IDR work.
5. Demonstrate our commitment to evolving what we do and how we do it to create the best funding landscape for the R&I community we support.

Section 5 details the requirements of the independent evaluation.

- Background to the Requirement

3.1 CRCRM Programme Rationale

Few of the major challenges we face fit within neat interdisciplinary boundaries. Most are inherently interdisciplinary – from delivering net zero and tackling obesity to preparing for the next pandemic and building economic resilience. Interdisciplinary research (IDR) is, and will continue to be, critical both to advancing our knowledge and understanding of these challenges and to developing workable solutions.

As research, especially IDR, evolves to embrace new approaches, technologies, and methods to address ever more complex challenges, it is right that we review and evolve how we assess and fund IDR that crosses and even surpasses Research Council remits.

The CRCRM pilot has been developed to support breakthrough interdisciplinary ideas that transcend, combine or significantly span disciplines. It will support ideas not routinely funded or perceived not to be funded through existing UKRI responsive mode schemes, emerging from the research community outside current disciplinary boundaries, to ensure all forms of IDR have a home within UKRI.

Applicants' projects must span at least two research council disciplinary remits.

3.2 IDR Market Failure

UKRI already supports interdisciplinary research through:

- Strategic calls where IDR addresses a specific challenge area, for example, IDR projects to address COVID
- Responsive mode schemes where IDR is within the boundaries of a single council, for example, IDR project combining economics and politics through ESRC
- Responsive mode schemes with a cross-research council remit agreement (CCRA) involving IDR across two or more council remits with a clear lead-council (lead-council $\geq 51\%$ of project remit). For example, IDR projects that span two council remits by 60% and 40%.

However, the 2015 Nurse Review and the 2022 Grant Review identified a potential gap in UKRI funding for projects that significantly span the remits of different research council disciplines and the need to identify a 'home' research council which disincentivises IDR. Difficulties in fairly assessing interdisciplinary research through traditional peer review were also noted.

There is a perception among researchers and strategic leaders in higher education institutions (HEIs) that reviewers' single-disciplinary focus makes IDR less likely to be funded. Feedback from UKRI's existing cross council mechanism for supporting research that covers more than 1 council remit, the Cross Council Remit Agreement, suggests that applications receive a 'death by a thousand cuts' in external peer review because the proposals are viewed through the lens of a single research discipline and the excitement of the whole project is lost.

3.3 Objectives and ambitions of the CRCRM scheme.

The objectives of the CRCRM scheme are to:

- Identify and fund ‘new’ interdisciplinary ideas from the research community outside current disciplinary boundaries that would be disadvantaged through existing assessment processes of responsive mode schemes
- Develop and establish an Interdisciplinary Assessment College (IAC) & new IDR assessment process that mitigate against the risks associated with disciplinary silo effects and lack of assessor experience and expertise in/of IDR
- Develop, implement and evaluate a pilot scheme that brings together funding, IAC and new IDR assessment process to inform round two of the scheme and best practice across UKRI and Councils

The ambitions of the CRCRM scheme are to:

- Unlock new research, new approaches or new methods that would not emerge from established disciplinary thinking.
- Demonstrate reciprocal research benefits through the integration of distinct disciplinary perspectives and spheres of knowledge.
- Support breakthrough or disruptive ideas and collaborations.
- Incentivise new and unexpected types of interdisciplinary research not routinely funded through existing UKRI responsive mode schemes.
- Encourage speculative, early stage and high potential interdisciplinary research proposals, embracing new concepts, techniques, or technologies.
- Challenge perceptions from the research community that IDR research is difficult to fund.

3.4 Addressing IDR Funding Barriers/Shortcomings

Two unique selling points of this scheme are its interdisciplinarity and its novel approach to the assessment of it.

1. The scheme itself is specifically for IDR proposals

IDR is about reciprocity across the disciplines, with the disciplines involved being changed or transformed by working together. This requires genuine collaboration and co-creation, not people / disciplines being ‘bolted on’ at the end of the project development. For the purposes of this scheme, we are using the following definition of interdisciplinary from the REF 2021 Interdisciplinary Advisory Panel final report:
“Interdisciplinary research is understood to achieve outcomes (including new approaches) that could not be achieved within the framework of a single discipline. Interdisciplinary research features significant interaction between two or more disciplines and / or moves beyond established disciplinary foundations in applying or integrating research approaches from other disciplines”

2. The new assessment approach moves away from a traditional ‘written’ peer review where each disciplinary element is assessed individually. This can disadvantage interdisciplinary proposals which should be assessed as a whole rather than on disciplinary lines.

The key element of the new assessment process, alongside a combination of complimentary assessment stages, is the use of a trained Interdisciplinary Assessment College (IAC). All members of the college have been appointed for their experience in working in or supporting interdisciplinary research, whether from academic or non-academic backgrounds and from across the diverse range of roles including academic, technical and professional services. They have received tailored training to review interdisciplinary applications and to mitigate against the viewing of applications through the lens of a single discipline. They are therefore expected to be best placed to identify and assess excellence in interdisciplinary ideas.

Through this novel assessment process, we anticipate that we will identify and support ‘new’ IDR projects that, through current routes, may struggle to secure support.

3.5 Accommodating Differing Disciplinary Backgrounds

The assessment of IDR for the CRCRM scheme brings together assessors from a range of disciplinary backgrounds. While they have experience in IDR, their expertise may be in a single discipline area, and this can present a number of challenges, *such as, in:

- understanding differing language and terminology across disciplines
- assessing the excellence of research across disciplines, such as where different methodological approaches are involved
- identifying true evidence of co-creation and co-design
- assessing whether there are reciprocal benefits for each discipline involved in addressing a research problem
- reaching consensus in panel conversations to arrive at funding recommendations.

*This list is not exhaustive.

For applicants to this IDR scheme, there are challenges in providing evidence that their applications meet the assessment criteria for this scheme in a way that can be recognised by assessors.

3.6 Timeline of the CRCRM pilot scheme

This pilot is running over two rounds, allowing us to assess demand, and test and refine our processes as we go. The first round was launched in 2023, and a second round will launch in 2024 and we expect to make approximately 36 awards at each round.

Each round involves a two-stage assessment process: an outline stage and a full stage, with successful outline stage applicants being invited to submit a full application.

The closing date for round 1 full stage applications was early February 2024, and award announcements are expected to be made in June 2024.

Round 2 will be announced in June and as with round 1 it will have an outline stage and a full stage. The outline stage will open in September 2024 and close in November 2024; successful applicants from the outline stage will be invited to submit full stage applications in April 2025 for submission by July 2025. The schedule for Round 2 will be similar to round 1 e.g. the length of times for each stage will be the same.

3.7 Application numbers

3.7.1 Applicants to the scheme

For Round 1, 979 applications were submitted to the outline stage, of which 899 were deemed eligible. Of these, 175 have been invited to submit full stage applications. For Round 2, we expect application numbers to be similar to Round 1.

3.7.2 Applicants to the Interdisciplinary Assessment College

Over 1300 applications were received for the IAC. Of these, 302 were appointed into one of two pools:

- Chair pool including chairs, deputy chairs and rovers (70 members).
- Panel member pool (232 members).

3.8 Assessment of applications

Applications are clustered into interdisciplinary panels for the assessment process. The interfaces between 5 research domains provide the framework to form 10 interdisciplinary clusters that the panels are based on:

- Engineering and Physical Sciences (EPS)
- Earth, Environment and Biological Sciences (EEB)
- Biomedical and Health (BIOM)
- Arts and Humanities (AH)
- Social sciences (SS)

- Scope

4.1 Scope of the Evaluation

- The evaluation will cover rounds 1 and 2 of the CRCRM pilot scheme.
- The timeline of the evaluation ends after the planned completion of the pilot scheme, when awards for both rounds are known. Therefore, the evaluation should highlight the evidence of outcomes of the assessment process, including impacts of this process at the point of completion of the pilot scheme.
- This evaluation is not required to consider the outputs of the research or the economic or societal impact of the research awarded.

4.2 Evaluation budget

- The total budget for this project shall not exceed £250,000.00 (excluding VAT). The bidder is invited to propose the budget breakdown by deliverable identified in Table 2.
- The budget breakdown must include all staffing costs for the project and any other costs that are incurred as a result of the work outlined in your approach, including (but not limited to):
 - Travel and subsistence for your staff relating to the delivery of the contract
 - Incentives to participate in surveys and interviews (to individuals not obliged to do so)
 - General administration costs relating to the delivery of the contract

4.3 Oversight and management of the independent evaluation

- The evaluation will be overseen within UKRI by the Senior Programme Manager for the Cross Research Council Responsive Mode scheme.
- The day-to-day point of contact for the contractor will be the Operations Lead for the UKRI IRM team, supported by a member of the UKRI Evaluation team (to be specified at a later date). The Operations Lead will monitor progress and risks on the contract through regular catch-up virtual meetings and/or emails.
- The governance of the CRCRM Evaluation is as follows: The CRCRM Evaluation Advisory Group will have oversight of the evaluation, with support from the CRCRM Evaluation Working group. The CRCRM Evaluation Advisory Group will report to the CRCRM Project Board which has overall oversight of the CRCRM pilot scheme. There is overlap in membership between the CRCRM Evaluation Advisory Group and the CRCRM Project Board.
- The IRM team will ensure the independent evaluator has access to the information collected through the monitoring and reporting of the CRCRM pilot. The IRM team will also assist the independent evaluator in identifying key stakeholders and, where appropriate and possible, provide introductions.
- Your team. It is the responsibility of the bidder to assign / recruit and manage sufficient staff to deliver against the contract, whilst remaining in the budget indicated as available for the contract throughout the contract period. Bidders must clearly explain how they propose to utilise the budget with respect to staff time to deliver the objectives of the contract as articulated in their approach.
- UKRI welcomes bids from both independent evaluators and consortia. In either situation, the bidder should nominate a CRCRM Evaluation Lead to hold primary responsibility to UKRI for the delivery of the evaluation against the terms of the contract. Proposals should describe in detail how these arrangements and any quality assurance mechanisms would be managed.

- The bidder may also choose to appoint a CRCRM Evaluation Primary Contact to act as the day-to-day contact with UKRI with respect to all matters pertaining to the execution of the contract, such as updates on progress against deliverables, and requests for raw data or information that UKRI may require from time to time. If no such individual is appointed the responsibilities of the CRCRM Evaluation Primary Contact will revert to the CRCRM Evaluation Lead.

4.4 Key Stakeholders

4.5 Data policy and compliance

- The bidder is invited to outline how the evaluation will be conducted in accordance with relevant data protection and security standards, including how they will safely store, use and destroy contact details of stakeholders, document sources shared about the investments during the evaluation and the other information collected as part of the evaluation.

4.6 Ethics and governance

- The bidder is invited to explain how the research will be conducted in accordance with high ethical standards.

4.7 Risks

The assessment of IDR for the CRCRM scheme carries operational risk inherent to the scheme, such as:

- Low survey response rate
- Low response rate to interviews
- Data sharing delays
- Round 2 funding being cut before it can be launched.

• Requirement

5.1 Overview of deliverables

The full evaluation of the CRCRM pilot scheme will involve three aspects:

- Internal process reporting by UKRI to enable continuous improvement, through:
 - Applicant surveys
 - IAC surveys
 - Administration surveys
 - Internal reflection points
 - Feedback to CRCRM Working Group and Project Board (expert opinion)

The data from these surveys will be shared with the independent evaluator in order to address the evaluation questions.

- Mini projects by Innovation and Research Caucus (IRC) to understand the need for UKRI to enhance processes to better review/assess interdisciplinary projects
 - The research design of these projects is based on the recognition that assessing interdisciplinary projects involves challenges and potential biases that differ from other types of funding schemes and may appeal differently to applicants from different backgrounds (e.g., disciplines, experience, etc). The ultimate objective is to identify potential modifications to the funding call and assessment process that can increase the breadth and diversity of disciplinary participation, quality, and alignment of applications with funding objectives.
- An independent evaluation to understand the wider impacts of the scheme (the purpose of this tender).

Section 2 outlines the aims of this independent evaluation.

Detailed questions we would like to answer are shown in Table 1, which sets out the specific elements to be addressed through this independent evaluation.

- Bidders should refer to the detailed questions in formulating their response.

The independent evaluation should consist of:

- An initial scoping phase to include the design of an evaluation framework and development of a baseline position from which we can understand the impact the scheme has had on the funding portfolio. It should incorporate discussion and written agreement around the detail of the evaluation roles and responsibilities
- A high-level evaluation delivery plan including methodology, to be delivered in written form
- A Round 1 Interim Process Report focussing on the R1 full stage process and highlighting any changes required for R2
- an Interim Round 1 Impact Report looking at R1 applications awarded against a benchmark
- A Round 2 Interim Process Report focussing on the R2 outline stage, and highlighting process improvements to feed into any future rounds
- A final Round 1 & Round 2 Process Report focussing on the funding decisions made in Rounds 1 and 2.
- A final Round 1 & Round 2 Impact Report, looking at the immediate term impact of applications awarded through both rounds on the funding portfolio, against a benchmark.
- a workshop to present and discuss key findings and recommendations and to involve representatives of the contractor and members of the CRCRM Evaluation Advisory and Working Groups.

These above deliverables are summarised and timetabled in Table 2.

Bidders should outline how the independent evaluator proposes to:

- address the aims and purpose of the evaluation and the means by which the evidence will be collected
- work collaboratively with IRM leadership teams throughout the independent evaluation, ensuring they gain an understanding of the work programme and making sure the impact evaluation aligns with the aims and objectives of the CRCRM pilot. The evaluator is also expected to engage with the IRC to ensure the three components of the evaluation can inform and learn from each other
- manage burdens on the IRM team and its stakeholders; engage, facilitate data sharing, protect confidentiality and feedback findings to participating key stakeholders and organisations contributing to the evaluation as it develops; manage any potential tensions.

5.2 Methodology

The number of interviews, case studies and sampling strategy should be justified according to the approach taken by the bidder to provide answers to the evaluation questions. Note that:

- the total number of awarded applicants from Rounds 1 and 2 is expected to be ~72
- applications may involve teams of researchers and collaborators
- the total number of applicants to Rounds 1 and 2 is expected to be ~1800
- the total number of appointed IAC members is 302
 - the IAC may be augmented following a skills gap analysis
- the total number of applicants to the IAC is ~1300

Bidders should clearly outline how their proposed methodology will answer the detailed evaluation questions in Table 1. They should be explicit about the limitations, evidence gaps and uncertainties in their proposed approach.

5.2.1 Process Evaluation

The aim should be to build on the outputs from existing internal surveys (which will be made available to the successful bidder) and from the IRC project to provide a comprehensive assessment of the effectiveness of the design and delivery of the CRCRM scheme and its assessment approach, drawing on the perspectives of multiple stakeholder groups. The successful bidder will be asked to analyse existing survey responses to identify key gaps and propose a comprehensive methodology in their framework to ensure that all of the process evaluation questions are answered. During the tender stage, bidders should outline how they will approach this task, and their overall approach to process evaluation. This could draw on additional management information analysis, alongside interviews with key operational and strategic stakeholders, and interviews or surveys with project leads and their teams, and hosts.

5.2.2 Impact Evaluation

The immediate term impact evaluation design should seek to understand whether awards made have met gaps in the portfolio of UKRI funding opportunities, and whether such awards would be unlikely to have been made via existing responsive mode or strategic schemes.

5.3 Data collection

A variety of data will be made available by UKRI, subject to appropriate consent, upon the signing of a contract including but not limited to:

- Grants' system (SIEBEL and The Funding Service (TFS)) application-level data
- IAC member data for consenting members, and aggregated data for those not consenting
- Outputs from IRC evaluation studies
- Data matching information from third party (Dimensions), subject to consent
- Question sets created by UKRI for surveys to
 - Applicants to the scheme
 - IAC chairs, rovers and panel members involved in assessment
 - UKRI administrators
- Responses to the above UKRI surveys, where available

- Benchmarking comparisons across other UKRI schemes
 - comparative schemes to be used as benchmarks could be responsive mode applications through the Cross Council Remit Agreement (CCRA), and strategic cross council schemes such as Physics for Life and Covid 19 calls

The CRCRM delivery team is (the UKRI Interdisciplinary Responsive Mode team) is undertaking surveys through the UKRI Citizen Space platform to Applicants, IAC members and to internal staff. The evaluation contractor will need to work with UKRI to contribute to the design of existing survey questions to these groups, to establish effective methods for streamlining data collection and for sharing evidence as appropriate.

Survey question sets for Applicants, IAC members and UKRI administrators are available to bidders on request.

It is important to ensure that duplication of data collection is avoided across the different elements of the evaluation, and that any consultation or other feedback collected is high value and meets all needs possible. The UKRI IRM team will coordinate the sharing of data between the respective parties.

If data is not readily available, we would aim to provide this within 5-7 working days.

In all cases of data collection, the burden on respondents must be minimised as far as possible. Data collection must build on what is already collected through existing processes, with any new data collection designed to fill gaps.

After completion of each deliverable, all datasets provided, compiled, or used, along with all analysis and reporting relating to them, must be provided to UKRI such that it will be possible to hand over in full to contracting organisations or third parties under contract to them, for the purposes of additional research and evaluation. The contractor will also need to make all the code available from analysis of data. Data must therefore be collected in such a way to enable this to happen. Bidders must state how this will be achieved, including how any data protection issues will be resolved.

5.4 Report writing and formatting

- All reports are expected to be iterated with key stakeholders of UKRI. The contract holder will need to provide UKRI with drafts of reports, which will need to respond directly to comments provided by key stakeholders, including the CRCRM Evaluation Advisory Board. Bidders should allow sufficient flexibility in their timetable for multiple drafts of reports.
- All outputs are designed for public dissemination. They must be produced to a high standard of layout and presentation and written in a manner accessible to a range of stakeholder audiences. Reports should include an executive summary of no more than two pages (linking or referencing supporting data and analysis in the full report and/or annexes).

5.5 Meetings and engagement

- The successful bidder will be expected to participate in meetings and communication which will be flexible according to the needs of the study and coordinated with the evaluation leads, as part of the ongoing oversight and delivery of the work. This might include: fortnightly/monthly catch-ups with the UKRI CRCRM Evaluation Working Group to update on progress and to hone and revise the evaluation approach as needed, concise written progress updates and presentations including key findings and messages to the UKRI CRCRM Evaluation Advisory Group at scheduled meeting points. Bidders should consider the reporting and engagement with the UKRI IRM team and UKRI CRCRM Evaluation Working Group and provide an indication of this in their proposal and budget, based on the deliverables set out in Table 2 – Timetable and Deliverables (section 6).
- The successful bidder will be expected to engage with external parties as necessary for the undertaking of the evaluation.

Table 1 – Evaluation Questions

*Indicates that UKRI has already collected data for round 1 through applicant and Interdisciplinary Assessment College surveys. Evaluators will have to design R2 survey questionnaires and analyse data combining R1 and R2 data where appropriate.
