SCHEDULE 1

SPECIFICATION OF SERVICES

Background

The UK government recognises Green Finance to be a rapidly emerging opportunity to support the delivery of landscape scale nature recovery. The UK governments is committed to stimulating Green Finance markets, with ambitions to mobilise £500m of private finance by 2027 and £1bn by 2030. The success of green finance requires not only demand and investment from the private sector, but also widespread engagement and adoption from landowners/managers as critical supply actors in markets.

As new markets for ecosystem services develop, it will be necessary for farmers/land managers to collaborate at catchment or landscape levels to attract and engage with investors and to reach the scale of delivery that is required. For buyers, investors and policy makers, aggregating supply addresses the need for scale for both environmental and economic outcomes. For farmers and landowners' aggregation is a key mechanism through which to gain access to private finance and create alternative revenue streams for the delivery of environmental outcomes.

Regional Farm and Rural Support Groups (RFRSGs) (listed here) have emerged as a bottom-up response to farming challenges and represent a key potential aggregator group with the capability to facilitate and reduce the barriers to engagement with Green Finance markets for both demand and supply side actors.

Natural England are particularly interested in understanding the capability and capacity of these regional hubs to support landscape scale environmental transformation. Specifically, the potential role RFRSGs could play in stimulating Green Finance markets and supporting key place-based environmental initiatives such as agri-environment schemes, Local Nature Recovery Strategies and improving the condition of designated protected sites (SSSI).

Aim and Objectives

Natural England are commissioning this research to investigate the potential of RFRSGs, specifically through their role as aggregators, to stimulate Green Finance markets and support key place-based environmental planning initiatives such as LNRS.

The objectives of this research are to:

1. Understand the coverage of RFRSGs or similar initiatives across England.
2. Characterise RFRSGs in England (with focus on geographical scale, membership, governance structures, level of engagement with Green Finance and links to local governance arrangements and delivery frameworks) to assess their individual and collective potential to act as a Green Finance aggregators and support place-based environmental planning.
3. Produce a heat-map to visually illustrate the above and identify gaps in national coverage and capacity to engage with Green Finance markets and support place-based environmental planning.
4. Explore and demonstrate the potential of RFRSGs to attract natural capital investment and support its distribution through a series of case studies aimed at exploring RFRSGs state of readiness and capacity to act as aggregators in local emerging ecosystem service markets.
5. Provide a series of recommendations aimed at:
 - a. RFRSGs: to facilitate their engagement with emerging Green Finance markets and highlighting best practice to enable other RFRSGs to follow suite

- b. Policy makers: to increase awareness of the potential of RFRSGs to support Green Finance policy and direct finance flows to deliver landscape scale environmental goals
- c. Responsible authorities: to increase awareness of the potential of RFRSGs to support and deliver on integrated place-based environmental planning.

Contractor requirements

As part of this contract the supplier will be required to:

1. Produce a data set (including, name, location, key contact details) of all RFRSGs and similar groups in England to provide a basis for surveying.
2. Design and conduct the survey with all English RFRSG and similar groups identified, to understand the coverage and characterise English RFRSG's consistent with the aims and objectives of this research.
3. Use survey data and appropriate GIS mapping software to produce a heat-map to illustrate geographic coverage and key characteristics of UK RFRSGs and similar initiatives.
4. Analyse survey responses to assess the potential for RFRSGs to act as aggregators within ecosystem service markets and support place-based environmental planning.
5. Use survey data to inform the selection of several RFRSGs to be case studies that represent a range of structures and levels of preparedness to act as aggregators within emerging ecosystem service markets.
6. Conduct semi-structured interviews with key actors within the identified case study RFRSGs to further explore key questions around capacity to; act as facilitators, design interventions, attract investment and negotiate transactions.
7. Record, transcribe and analyse qualitative data using appropriate software (i.e. QSR Nvivo).
8. Produce research outputs detailed in the section below.
9. Adhere to NE's ethical principles and obtain ethical approvals prior to commencing any data collection activities.

Outputs

The table below outlines the main obligated outputs from the research:

Deliverable reference	Deliverable detail
D0: A project website	A simple attractive project webpage providing a brief description of the project remit, process and providing contact details and to aid with recruiting participants during the research. At contractor discretion this can contain links to any and all of the below outputs, providing a linking point and 'one stop shop'. To be hosted by Hutton beyond for at least 5 years after the end of the project.
D1: A data set of all RFRSGs currently active in England	An up-to-date data set listing the name, location and key contact details of all RFRSGs currently active in England.
D2: GIS Heat Map of RFRSG coverage and capacity across England	Provide a descriptive summary of the survey data and produce a heat map (GIS) based on this data to illustrate coverage and key capacity indicators.

D3: Case study summaries	A series of engaging case study summaries (i.e. infographics/slides/leaflets) aimed at key user groups (RFRSGs, policy makers and responsible authorities)
D4: Final report	Summative report combining both stages of the research, reporting on methodology, findings and implications of the work for policy and practice.
D5: Research webinar	Presentation of research findings to a DEFRA, NE and a wider ALB's audience
