Statement of Work - This Statement of Work is issued under and in accordance with the Contract entered between the parties dated [tbc].

Project	CR20059 - Designing an Auction to Install Energy Efficiency Measures in Small and Medium Sized (SMEs) Businesses. The aim of this study is to understand the different options for designing and running an energy efficiency auction and the likely impact of those options on the success of the auction.
Project Start Date	Monday, 3 rd August 2020
Project Expiry Date	Thursday, 31 st December 2020
Notice Period for Cancellation	Notice period for cancellation is 30 days.
Service & Deliverables	BEIS is commissioning research to understand how similar auctions work and design and test the feasibility of potential auction models. Specific questions we expect the research to answer (which should take the above characteristics into account) are: A. What is likely to be the most effective auction process for UK SMEs? • What are the potential models for the auction process that bidders would follow when participating in an auction e.g. is there a role for pre-qualification/verification, what are the options around different methods for bidding, what, if any appeal mechanisms should be in place? • What are the advantages/disadvantages of using the different bidding mechanisms e.g. pay as clear/pay as bid? • What are the advantages/disadvantages of various timescales for successful bidders to install measures? • What is ideal frequency of the auction, setting out the pros and cons of single versus multiple auction rounds? B. How can we encourage and maximise participation in the auction? • Which steps can be taken to attract bidders? And how successful are these likely to be? • How can the auction design strike a balance between encouraging participation (particularly as we are targeting SMEs) and VfM? This is partially about considering the amount of administration that a SME will be willing to participate in to engage with an auction, as well as our obligations to protect the public purse. • What are the pros and cons of restricting the auction to third party bidders or allowing both third party bidders and SMEs to bid? • To what extent would expanding initial audits beyond energy efficiency to consider other low carbon measures such as smart energy/ solar PV / EV charging etc encourage participation? While funding would be targeted at energy efficiency measures only. C. What is the best funding model? • What is the minimum viable amount of funding required to run a successful auction for year 1, explaining the rationale?

	• Suggest potential trajectories for funding the auction in subsequent years. • Recommend the overall scheme size to ensure that energy efficiency becomes recognised and important to SMEs, and there is a market able to respond to demand. D. How can we ensure cost effectiveness? • Recommend ways to minimise search costs and administrative overheads while maximising the cost effectiveness of the auction administration – for both government and participants • Recommend ways to maximise cost effectiveness, that is increase efficiency of allocated budget, incentivise submission of minimum viable bids, reduce the risk of high failure rate • To what extent, if any, should the auction require any initial energy audits to include advice on wider energy measures such as smart energy, battery storage, EV charging and renewables? E. How can we best monitor and evaluate the auction? • What are the options for measurement and verification of the auction process and measures delivered – that balances the volume of administration that SMEs are willing to undertake with the need to protect public funds? • Could monitoring and verification be assisted by requiring benefiting SMEs to install smart meters? • How could an auction be designed to facilitate quality monitoring and a future evaluation? • What methods are there to ensure quality standards? Please note that BEIS currently has a contract with BSI to deliver a new Publicly Available Specification (PAS) for the installation of energy efficiency measures in non-domestic buildings¹. • What options are there to deal with non-delivery by participants? F. Other • What other risks and mitigations should be considered when designing and delivering an energy efficiency auction? • How do we ensure the auction is compliant with state aid rules? • What are the critical success factors for an auction targeting SMEs? The following outputs are required within the project, irrespective of whether the proposed methodologies are used or whether alternatives are proposed. Alternative reporting approaches or timing may be proposed so long as they exceed the requirements set out below and the reasons are fully explained. All outputs will be owned by BEIS. The outputs of this research project are expected to include: Phase 1 By September 2020 Interim report on auction models The interim report should set out the results of the evidence review and detail potential models for the auction with explanations of how they will perform against the criteria set out in research questions A-F in the methodology section above.

	Presentation on Phase 1 The research team should provide a face-to-face (or virtual, if necessary due to social distancing) presentation of the interim findings for policy and analytical colleagues at BEIS. Phase 2 By December 2020 Final synthesis report of Phases 1 and 2 The final synthesis report will expand on the interim evidence, summarise the work undertaken, and methodology used, and describe in detail proposed auction models with reference to how these were revised following the qualitative research. It will also make recommendations on the proposed auction models. It must be written to a sufficiently high standard for publication. Our experience shows that this may require 3-4 drafts, and this should be taken into account when considering timelines and costs. Slide Pack A slide pack will present the key findings in an easily accessible form. This should help ensure that relevant findings of the report can be easily selected and presented for/by the various cross Whitehall teams. This slide pack should focus on the auction options rather than the methodology or underpinning evidence. Final Phase 2 Presentation The research team should provide a face-to-face presentation (or virtual, if necessary) of the final findings for policy and analytical colleagues at BEIS and potentially other Government Departments at the end of Phase 2. Other reporting requirements or deliverables Where relevant, outputs should include suitable technical annexes and datasets. Technical annexes should provide sufficient detail such that the methodology is replicable. We would welcome suggestions as to any further outputs and would expect to agree a final set of deliverables at the inception stage. It is desirable to also have transcripts of qualitative interviews or other records of discussions with stakeholders, for internal BEIS use. However, if it is not possible to include these, bidders are asked to specify how they will record and analyse their qualitative research and to propose alternative outputs which could be used more widely by BEIS. It is assumed that most reports will be published to provide a transparent evidence base for ongoing policy making decisions. To demonstrate relevant experience in producing high quality reporting, bids must: • specify who in the project team will be responsible for drafting the report; • specify who will be responsible for quality assurance before it comes to BEIS.
