Schedule 1: Services

Overview and context

1. Homes England (HE) has provided a variety of digital services<sup>1</sup> and support to the Buyer (the Digital Services) in accordance with the service level agreement between the Buyer and HE, since the Buyer's inception as a governmental arm's length body in 2018. It was initially envisaged the SLA would run for a combined total of 4 years however, HE served notice of early termination of SLA on the Buyer in September 2021. Provision of the Digital Services by HE will cease in March 2024 (the Transition Date).
2. The Buyer must have a fully enabled digital capability to function effectively and deliver its core organisational (and government) objectives.

  - e. make the Transition as seamless as possible.

  - b. Conduct a comprehensive readiness and adoption assessments of the recommended adoption strategy.
  - c. Provide an overview of the recommended characteristics, skills and services required in the new MSP to deliver the Transition, to assist the Buyer's selection of a new MSP.
  - d. Recommend a route for the selection and appointment of a new MSP i.e. a public framework which provides the Buyer with access to a range of appropriately qualified MSPs with the characteristics, skills and services to deliver the Transition or a bespoke open competition procurement process. Note it is expected the value of such a procurement process will be in excess of the Public Contract Regulations 2015 (the Regulations) threshold and such procurement will therefore need to be compliant with the Regulations.
  - e. Provide an analysis of how the Transition will achieve the expected benefits for the Buyer, including but not limited to;
    - i. Future proof of services. The appointed MSP must use the best technologies and equipment on the market to deliver services. The services and infrastructure provided by the MSP are required to kept up to date, with risk mitigations in place.
    - ii. Lower capital outlay and predictable monthly costs. Investment in specialist hardware and software can be high, but the appointed MSP should be able to offer high calibre enterprise and carrier grade solutions, with a fixed recharge model meaning that the Buyer can forecast spending more accurately and better understand the whole life cost over the lifecycle of the contract, i.e., with no unexpected upgrade charges, or changes to recharge processes.
    - iii. A more flexible, responsive service. The MSP is expected to be extremely flexible, allowing for growth when necessary, or cost savings when consolidation is required; a provision that usually aligns with need, minimises waste and maximises readiness. New services can also be delivered at pace in the event of unforeseen changes to the operational landscape.
    - iv. Converged services. Expectation that multiple managed IT services can be provisioned over a single 'converged' connection, resulting in cost-savings on infrastructure. There are additional productivity and efficiency benefits should also be possible, in the fact that personnel working from home have access to all the voice and data applications required on demand.

- v. Highly resilient and secure infrastructure. The MSP's data centres and managed network infrastructure is required to be more robust than a standard Enterprise IT service, e.g., HE. Infrastructure is typically run under 24/7 x 365 management, with government approval security procedures robustly in place. Levels of 99.99% uptime can be expected and help insure against the losses associated with downtime.
  - vi. Expertise. Through the MSP, the Buyer will gain access to staff with deep knowledge and specialist skills across the digital space.
  - vii. Centralisation. With a managed network the Buyer expects to benefit from the ability to centralise all applications and servers within managed data centres. Access to centralised data centres within the network must also provide access to virtual services, as well as storage and backup infrastructure.
  - viii. Increased service levels. The MSP is expected to provide greater control of service levels and performance, and with enforceable SLA's, the Buyer can expect dedicated quality and continuity of service. The MSP service organisation will also offer 24/7 x/ 365 support. Beyond BAU activity at an operational level the proactive MSP will also be partnering effectively, looking at strategy and making recommendations on new technologies or system tweaks to make improvements, enhance performance and add continual value.
  - ix. Disaster recovery and business continuity. The delivery of services will be the life blood of the MSP. They will have designed networks and data centres that will be available, resilient and redundant for maintaining business continuity. This will result in the Buyer being better positioned to take advantage of such a technological investment.
  - x. Better contribution to net-zero. By centralising critical business systems within power-efficient data centres and running more applications on a virtual platform, the MSP can help the Buyer deliver on a more sustainable future – lowering carbon footprint whilst reducing costs. It can also put the Buyer at the cutting edge when it comes to exploiting the opportunities of emerging technology, which may offer rolling opportunities to enhance eco credentials and reduce technical debt.
- f. Map core dependencies to ensure activities are planned and evaluated with business justification as set out in a detailed roadmap for the Transition with a brief walkthrough each of the processes to achieve Transition.
  - g. Provide a supporting mind-map (as project document catalogue) detailing each of the processes to be implemented (and intrinsic elements thereof) throughout the Transition.
  - h. Provide an analysis of the overall costs associated with the Transition. The costs analysis shall be broken down between initial transition costs and on-going annual costs.

Schedule 2: Call-Off Contract charges

For each individual Service, the applicable Call-Off Contract Charges (in accordance with the Supplier's Digital Marketplace pricing document) can't be amended during the term of the Call-Off Contract. A summary of the estimated Charges for each phase of the Service delivery is set out in the Order Form in the payment profile and call off charges sections.
